HOUSTON,

BRIDGE OF WEIR, CROSSLEE, ERSKINE, BISHOPTON AND LANGBANK.

HOUSTON (or Houstoun) is a village or small town in the united parish of Houston and Kilellan, 14 miles from Glasgow, 7 from Paisley, the like distance from Port Glasgow, pleasantly situated on both sides of the Houston burn. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving and embroidery. At the east end of the village is a small parish church, there is also a Free church and a Roman Catholic chapel and school, also Board schools. It is said that the town is partly built of the stones that once composed the Castle of Houston, which formerly stood in this neighbourhood, to the east—an ancient mansion, the residence of the knights of Houston, demolished in 1730, by a proprietor of the estate. Population of the village in 1871, 518.

About one mile from Houston and three from Johnstone (a station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway) most delightfully and romantically situated in a valley, is WEIR BRIDGE, more familiarly known by the name of "Bridge of Weir." It is the boundary of the parish in this quarter, being divided from the parish of Kibbarchan by the river Gryffe. A Free church is in the village, also Board schools, and there are also a very fine cotton mill, and three tanneries, at which are employed a considerable number of the industrious classes. Population in 1871, 1,315.

About one mile hence is CROSSLEE, once participating in the prosperity enjoyed by different places in this parish as the seat of manufactures, but lately almost deserted, owing to the destruction by fire of a large cotton mill, in which many hands were employed. The united parish is about six miles in length by three in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. Acreage of the parish of Houston and Kilellan, 7,586; population of Crosslee in 1871, 379.

The parish of ERSKINE is six miles in length and from three to four in breadth, situate on the Clyde, opposite to Kilpatrick. The ground rises gently from the margin of the river, and is laid out in rich plantations, orchards and corn fields. Erskine House, the seat of Lord Blantyre, is a beautiful mansion, seated amidst tasteful pleasure grounds facing the Clyde. The Glasgow and Greenock Section of the Caledonian Railway passes through the parish. Erskine, it is said, is the oldest ferry on the Clyde. There is a neat and comfortable inn at this place. Acreage, 7,535; population in 1871, 1,565.

BISHOPTON is a small village in Erskine parish, on the Glasgow and Greenock road, 12 miles w.s.w. from the former place and 10½ s.e. from the latter. There is a place of worship belonging to the Free church, and a Board school. Brick making is carried on to some extent, and may be said to constitute the only approach to manufacturing in the village. The Greenock Section of the Caledonian line passes near to the village, for which it has a station. Population in 1871, 835.

LANGBANK is another small village in the same parish as Bishopton, from which place it is distant 3¼ miles. It is pleasantly situated on the Clyde, and is rapidly growing into favour as a country residence, several of the Glasgow merchants having handsome villas here. A church under the Establishment and also one for United Presbyterians have recently been erected. The former is a plain stone edifice with bell tower, whilst the latter has greater pretensions to architectural beauty, being ornamented with a tower and spire of considerable elevation. There is a good Board school in the village, and a station on the Greenock Section of the Caledonian Railway.

INNERKIP,

WEMYSS BAY, SKELMORLIE (AYRSHIRE), AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INNERKIP (or Inverkip) is a village in the parish of its name, six miles south-west from Greenock, situated on the Kipp water, which intersects the district from east to west, and falls into the Clyde. The village is sometimes called the "Auld Kirk." The Daff and some other rivulets irrigate the district. In their course they are broken into small cascades, which produce a pleasing effect, and the meadows through which they pass are finely embanked. Ardgowan House, the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw Stewart, Bart. is pleasantly situated on a kind of peninsula, a little north of the village. It is a fine modern building, surrounded with beautiful and romantic pleasure grounds. Besides the parish church, which is a neat and handsome edifice, surmounted by a spire, with a clock, there is a Free church, one for Episcopalians, and a Roman Catholic chapel; and there is a Board school in the village. Communication with other towns is rendered easy by means of the Wemyss Bay section of the Caledonian Railway, which has a station here. Acreage of the parish, 12,549; population in 1871, 4,502, and of the village, 637.

WEMYSS BAY is two miles from Innerkip, and is beautifully situated on the banks of the Clyde. It is fast rising into notice as a watering place. Many respectable families have here taken up their residence, and a number of handsome villas and an excellent hotel have been erected, all of which are well tenanted in the summer season. There is a church in connection with the Establishment, one for United Presbyterians, and a chapel for Episcopalians. The Caledonian Railway Company has a terminal station here, on their Wemyss Bay section, and their steamers also call to take in passengers for Largs, Milport, Fairlie, Rothesay and other places. The Clydesdale Bank, Limited, has a branch in the village. SKELMORLIE (Ayrshire) is immediately connected with Wemyss Bay, and vies with it in beauty of situation and popularity as a summer residence. The houses are generally of a superior class, and many respectable shops are established. Gas works have also been erected. A hydropathic institution is in operation, under the superintendence of Dr. Currie. It is romantically situated upon a cliff overlooking the bay

JOHNSTONE,

ELDERSLIE, KILBARCHAN, MILLIKEN PARK AND CARTSIDE.

JOHNSTONE is a very considerable manufacturing town, within the landward part of the abbey parish of Paisley, 3½ miles w. from that town, 10 w. from Glasgow, 8 n. from Beith, and 14 s.e. from Greenock, most agreeably situated, contiguous to the Black Cart river. The increase of population in this locality has been very remarkable. In 1782 it contained but ten persons. The system of feuing was then commenced here, and since that period it has been progressively increasing up to the present time. Trade and commerce, likewise, have kept pace with the augmentation of its population, there being now in the neighbourhood a large cotton mill, a large paper mill, a flax mill, iron foundries, and extensive engineering, machine and tool manufactories, and four branch banks established here. There were at one time upwards of 800 hand loom weavers in this town, but this trade is now entirely extinct. Contiguous to the town are several valuable iron, coal and shale mines. The town is very regularly laid out, having good streets, with two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place; the houses are for the most part substantially constructed; the shops are numerous, and well stocked. The town is lighted with gas and bountifully supplied with water. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway passes the town, and affords direct communication with all parts of the country. Many years ago a canal was opened between this place, Paisley and Glasgow, which has proved of the greatest utility. From an eminence on the Paisley road, the town of Johnstone has a pleasing appearance; to the left, at a short distance, stands Johnston's Castle, surrounded by thriving plantations, and commanding a fine view of the country for many miles round. To the west of the town, immediately beyond the river Cart, is the seat of Sir Robert Napier, a delightful residence. Johnstone possesses nothing to invite the antiquarian or amuse the traveller; but curiosity may be gratified by a visit to the village of ELDERSLIE (a mile east of this place), once the residence of the renowned Wallace. The places of worship are the parish church, a Scottish Episcopal church, a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The public institutions are the Johnstone Working Men's Institute containing a news room, a public hall capable of holding 1,000 people and which contains a very fine organ, the gift of Mr. Bousfield, of the firm of Finlayson, Bousfield & Co., of this town, with Mechanics' Institute, and bible, missionary, and friendly societies. Two schools have been erected under the Scotch Education Act, capable of affording accommodation for upwards of 1,000 children; besides these, there are also a Roman Catholic school and a school for factory children. Horse fairs are held on the Thursday after the second Monday of July and first Friday in January, and a cattle and pleasure fair in the middle of July, which lasts for three days. Population in 1871, 7,533, and in 1881, 9,268.

KILBARCHAN is a manufacturing town, in the parish of its name, one mile and a half from Johnstone, and about five miles from Paisley; situated on the southern declivity of a hill, and pretty regularly built. Upwards of 1,000 looms are employed in this place and its immediate vicinity in the manufacture of silk, cotton, shawls, robes, &c. In the centre of the town is a school-house, with a tower, on which is the statue of Habbie Simpson, the well-known Scotch piper, born in this parish. It was executed by Archibald Robertson, a young sculptor from Greenock. The places of worship are the parish church, and a United Presbyterian chapel. Gas was introduced by a company in 1816, and the town is now well lighted. There are two public libraries containing several thousand volumes. There is a branch of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited. A horse fair is held annually on the first Tuesday in December (old style). Area of the parish, 9,096; population in 1871, 4,093, the town numbering 2,678.

LOCHWINNOCH,

NEW TOWN OF BELTREES AND HOW-WOOD.

LOCHWINNOCH is a large village in the parish of its name, 15½ miles s.w. from Glasgow, 8½ s.s.w. from Paisley, 6½ s.s.w. from Johnstone, and 3½ m. from Beith. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway has a station close to the town. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its appellation, and is surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, highly attractive to the tourist; among which the lovely loch, the banks of the Calder, the sublime cataract of Reekun Linn, the bottomless Gurrat's Linn, and the remains of several old castles, are all eminently worthy of a visit from the stranger to these parts. The lake, which stretches in a northerly and southerly direction, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart River; it is about two miles in length by one in breadth, but was formerly much more extensive, having been contracted by an embankment, whereby several hundred acres of land have been obtained and brought into cultivation. On the north-west side of the loch stands Castle Semple House, the seat of Henry Lee Harvey, Esq., the situation of which is in the highest degree picturesque; it occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about the year 1500; it was demolished in 1735. On a small island in the lake is the "Peel," the remains of some forgotten stronghold, of which nothing but a vault now exists. Lochwinnoch possesses some claims to notice as a place of manufactures, and contains a very large cabinet and chair manufactory, carried on by Messrs. Hunter, Hamilton and Crawford, a bleach-field, a woollen mill, &c. There is also established here a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited. The village is ornamented by a parochial church, having a handsome steeple; also a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Saturday of each month. There is an annual fair called the "Fair of Hill," which is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). The parish of Lochwinnoch, which embraces 19,507 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 3,316, and in 1881, 3,366, of this number 1,182 belonged to the village.

How-wood is a small village in the parish of Lochwinnoch, 3½ miles from that town, situate on the high road between Beith and Glasgow. About a mile and a half nearer to Lochwinnoch, in that parish, is a place called New Town of BELTREES, another small village, neither of which contain any object worthy of particular description. In 1871, How-wood had a population of 512, and in 1881, 576.

MEARNS, WITH BUSBY AND NEWTON.

MEARNS is a village in the parish of its name, seven miles from Glasgow and eight from Paisley, and about three and a half miles from Clarkston station, on the Glasgow and Kilbride line. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and extends seven miles in length by about three in breadth. The surface of the land is finely diversified by pleasing undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile, and adapted to the purposes of the dairy, whilst other portions of the district afford excellent pasturage. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton, joins the former road a little beyond the King's Well Inn. In the parish are several bleach fields, calico printing works, and an extensive yarn spinning mill; the latter two at BUSBY, a small romantic village in the parish of Mearns, six miles from Glasgow. At NEWTON, another village in Mearns, three miles from Giffnock, a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride line, stands the parish church, a neat stone edifice, with a handsome spire, in which is an excellent clock; and the interior contains seven hundred slittings. There is also a chapel for United Presbyterians, which will accommodate a congregation of five hundred persons. A Board school has been erected to accommodate about five hundred children. The village of Mearns is well built and of pleasing appearance; it possesses a superior inn, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited. The only object of antiquity in the parish is the castle of Mearns, near that village. It is a large square tower, seated on a rocky eminence, commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect, is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been secured by a drawbridge; this interesting relic of former times is now out of repair and dismantled; it belongs to Sir R. M. Shaw Stewart, Bart., of Ardgowan, but its origin is lost in obscurity. The parish is adorned by several elegant modern seats and mansions; and the lands are irrigated and refreshed by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly two miles and a half in circumference. The parish, which embraces 10,281 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 8,548, and in 1881, 8,965.

PAISLEY,

WITH BALACLAVA, INKERMEN, LINWOOD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PAISLEY is a parliamentary borough, and the seat of a presbytery, in the parish of the abbey of Paisley, 63 miles west by south from Edinburgh, about 7 miles south by west from Glasgow, and 17 south-east from Greenock. This active manufacturing town, so distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive fabrications of thread, stands in a healthful and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about three miles above the confluence of this river with the Clyde, and enjoys the advantages of railway communication, being connected with Glasgow, Greenock, Kilmarnock, Ayr, &c., by the iron road. The Burgh, or Old Town, of Paisley, is on the western side of the river; the New Town on the eastern side. The High Church, with its lofty spire, rises from a fine eminence, the south side of which, and its summit, are covered with buildings, and its northern slope is laid out in gardens; this central ridge forms a natural terrace, which runs westward from the river nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fort and a fortified camp, whence is a prospect extensive and beautiful; with this camp several minor stations are believed to have had communication, each placed on the summit of a neighbouring eminence, such as Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead; while the name of "Causeyside," still retained by one of the streets of the burgh, is thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road, leading to or by the principal station.

Paisley is generally supposed to have been the Vandura of Ptolemy, a notion supported by the etymology of the name of Vandura—the British words weir and signifying the "white water," and thus expressing the present distinctive appellation of the river, on the banks of which the town is built. In ancient days, Paisley was distinguished only for its abbey, and the shrine of Saint Merrin, which it enclosed, was resorted to by multitudes of pilgrims from all parts of Scotland; Saints James, Mirrin, and M'burgie, divided the tutelary honours. This great and opulent monastic establishment was founded in the year 1164, by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Allan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum; the religious order of the Cistercians were the first occupants. It was originally a priory, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey, its lands being by James II. erected into a regality, of which the abbot was lord. By Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, the abbey precincts were surrounded by a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished; still a portion of it remains, as does an inscription setting forth, in quaint rhyme, Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription was on a tablet in the wall, and is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. In 1560, the Reformation having taken place, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claude Hamilton, third son of the Duke of Chatelherault, and on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley. The abbey lands having been transferred in 1652 from the Earl of Abercorn to the Earl of Angus, and from him in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, the greater portion became the property, by purchase, of the Marquis of Abercorn in 1761, who intended to have kept it entire as a residence, but finding it had become much dilapidated, he let it on building leases; so that the parks, orchards, and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the stones from the wall form a portion of the materials of which the houses were built.

The abbey church, mutilated as it now is, constitutes the most interesting public structure of which Paisley can boast; the nave, which in the interior exhibits three tiers of arches, is neatly fitted up, and contains some curious monuments and sepulchral inscriptions. It is the parochial church of an extensive rural district lying around the town, and called the "Parish of the Abbey of Paisley." The choir is levelled to within a few feet of the ground; the north transept is more entire, and displays in its large well-proportioned northern window a striking relic of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence. Three windows of good size and elegant design, with recessed doorway, form the principal ornaments of the western front. Near the abbey is a Gothic chapel, built in 1499, and dedicated to Saints Columba and Mirrin, and now used as a place of sepulchre for the Abercorn family. The remarkable degree of resonance possessed by this little building (which is still, from the circumstance, called the sounding aisle), has been magnified by most writers; much of the effect which it formerly produced is now, however, lost, from the re-construction within the chapel of a large altar tomb, consecrated to the memory of Marjory Bruce, wife of the great steward, Walter, as well as mother of Robert II. The aperture in the brickwork, formed to close up the interstices of a once beautiful eastern window, likewise contributed to weaken the echo. It is not improbable that, for some time after the suppression of its abbey, Paisley languished, and when Crawford, the first regular historian of Renfrewshire, produced his learned and useful work, the town consisted of no more than one principal street, and a few narrow lanes or wynds branching from it. Its population did not at that time exceed 3,000; nay, some assert that its inhabitants were then only about 1,500 in number.

The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the new, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and there are three parallel lines running from east to west of very great length. The New Town, comprising many streets occupies a level surface on the eastern side of the Cart. Of both portions of the town, the entire length can scarcely be less than two miles; while the extreme breadth of Paisley, from north to south, must reach at least a mile and a half. East, north, and west of it are suburbs with distinct names, such as Williamsburgh, Dovesland, Lylesland, Carriage-hill, Charleston, Maxwellton, Ferguslie, Castle Head, Meikluriggs and Mossvale. The eastern and western parts of the town are connected by three bridges, two of which have recently been constructed of iron; one of them has had its name changed from Sueddon Bridge to that of Abercorn Bridge. The present old stone bridge at the foot of High street, is about to be widened and made to harmonise with its new neighbour. The large arch carrying the railway across the river is close to the new Abercorn bridge. The George A. Clark Town Hall is regarded as the most magnificent hall in Scotland, the cost of its erection being not less than one hundred thousand pounds. It is called after one of the brothers Clark, who bequeathed £20,000 about ten years ago for its erection, the deficiency between this sum and its cost having in a princely manner been subscribed for by the three surviving brothers of the Clark family, whose names deserve lasting remembrance by a grateful community. These are James William John, and Stewart. The eldest brother, James, died a few months before the hall was opened. The venerable mother of the family bequeathed some four or five thousand pounds to furnish an organ for the hall, which has just been erected by an eminent London firm, Messrs. Bryceson Brothers and Ellice; it is a four manual instrument, and is the finest organ in Scotland, except that in the college of Edinburgh. The hall was formally opened on the 30th of January, 1832, on which occasion the Messrs. Clark invited to a conversation 1,200 of the élite of Paisley, and of many other towns in Scotland. A procession of all the trades took place during the day, and surpassed in magnificence any other procession ever known in the district. It was a condition of Mr. Clark that the hall should be erected in the New Town, that being the district in which he was born in 1833. The erection stands on the margin of the river Cart, and contains a chime of bells in the tower, which by ingenious mechanism plays 35 times, varied each day of the month. Gas was first introduced 1834, and all the streets are illuminated with it; and the town is well supplied with water. A most conspicuous public edifice is the County Buildings, a large towered, turreted, and embattled fabric, comprehending besides a variety of rooms and offices for county and burgh meetings, and for public functionaries, the county gaol, a debtors' gaol, a bridewell, and a prison chapel, erected in 1820. Between the noble pile which forms the front edifice and the prison in its rear are two courts for exercise and air. By a charter granted by James IV., in 1483, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The present municipal body consists of a provost, four bailies, a treasurer, and ten councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace. Paisley returns one member to the legislature; the present member is William Holms, Esq.

A young lady of some historical notoriety was the original cause of Paisley becoming a manufacturing town. In 1697, a daughter of the Laird of Bargaren, aged eleven years, named Christian Shaw, preferred a charge of bewitching her against a servant girl, with whom she had quarrelled, and nineteen alleged confederates, seven of whom were condemned, and six of the number burnt on Gallowgreen, Paisley. The inciter to this detestable act of superstitions cruelty subsequently acquired great skill in spinning fine yarn. Her first production having been sold very advantageously at Bath by Lady Blantyre to the lace-makers, stimulated Miss Shaw to extend her transactions by availing herself of the co-operation of a relative in Holland; the demand for this thread soon became great, and the most extensive manufacturers that arose in Scotland at that period acknowledged "the bewitched lady" as their originator. She afterwards became the wife of the minister of Kilmarnock. Coarse linen checks were the first fabrics produced by the Paisley looms; to these succeeded others of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. Silk gauze then took the lead, about the year 1760, and Spitalfields soon yielded to its more successful competitor, for such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The produce of this article, together with sewing thread, lawn and linen gauze, amounted for the year 1784 to £579,000, and more than 26,000 persons were employed in their fabrication. But the demand for the popular gauze rapidly decreased, and soon became insignificant. Muslin, cambric and cotton thread were the next productions of Paisley industry and skill; to these succeeded silk and cotton shawls, scarfs and plaids, composed of silk and merino wool. These still continue to exhibit the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers, and in the manufacture of them they have arrived at great perfection. In Paisley and its neighbourhood are numerous thread and cotton spinning mills, bleaching and printing works, dye-houses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, a brewery, distilleries, soap, starch, and corn flour manufactories, and a very extensive tannery. There are seven banking establishments; these are branches of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, the British Linen Co. the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. Three newspapers are published in Paisley, one daily, the others weekly.

Between the year 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was, at an expense of £4,000, made navigable to the town, for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen. Attempts were about 1843 made with dredging machines to deepen it, so as to admit of vessels of greater burthen, but it was found to be impracticable. The Glasgow and Johnstone canal passes along the southern verge of the town, presenting at one point a fine basin and wharf; but this canal is about to be turned into a railway by the Glasgow and South-Western Company. Paisley contains eight churches connected with the Establishment

—viz., the Abbey, the High Church, St. George's, the Martyrs', the North, the South, the Middle, and the Gaelic, now known as St. Columba church, and seven Free churches, one of which has a service in Gaelic every Sabbath forenoon. There are also six United Presbyterian chapels, one Reformed Presbyterian, one Episcopal, Congregationalist, three Baptist, one Methodist, one Evangelical Union, and two Roman Catholics. The situation of each and the names of their respective ministers will be found in a subsequent page. Many charitable institutions and schools are liberally maintained by the inhabitants of Paisley. Among them the Infirmary, the Town Hospital or Poorhouse, the Philosophical Institution and Humane Society, Hutcheson's Charity School, the Industrial School, Roman Catholic school, Sabbath school, and several excellent schools under the Paisley School Board. Of the Board schools those most worthy of notice are the Grammar School and Academy, in which several of the higher branches of education are taught, and five elementary schools, and situated in the north, north-west, east, south, and west districts of the town respectively. These are handsome and commodious buildings. The John Neilson Educational Institution, richly endowed by the late John Neilson, Esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852. It is a handsome, massive structure, surmounted by a lofty dome, and from its elevated position, on which the Roman camp was placed, is a conspicuous ornament to the town. There are some friendly associations, Bible and missionary societies, and a Free Library and Museum, the gift to the town of Sir Peter Coats, of Woodside; and public reading rooms for the working classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town. In Gilmour street is a handsome structure, erected in 1847, as a Government School of Design. In this street is also a handsome newsroom, erected in 1803, which includes a public coffee room of noble dimensions, on the tables of which newspapers, reviews, and magazines abound; and the place is liberally thrown open to strangers. There is a theatre, which is opened occasionally; and races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres of land, round which the race course goes, has, by a recent Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park. One of the finest ornaments to the town are the Fountain Gardens, which are the noble gift of Thomas Coats, Esq. of Ferguslie House. They extend between Love street and Caledonian street, and are tastefully laid out, and contain every necessary for the convenience and comfort of the public. The ground is six acres in extent. A large and ornamental fountain is fixed in the centre, and four smaller ones are placed, one at each angle of the gardens. A new workhouse was erected in 1850. It occupies a commanding situation in the upper part of the town. The style is Elizabethan, and there is accommodation for six hundred inmates; adjoining is the Lunatic Asylum, built in the same style, and capable of containing ninety-eight patients. In the immediate neighbourhood is the Burgh or Riccarton Asylum, a large handsome building, which, by its elevated position, forms a prominent feature to the south side of the town. It cost £24,000. Near to this asylum is the Brodie Park, a farm containing 26 acres, bequeathed to the town council of Paisley, about 10 years ago, by the late Mr. Brodie, on behalf of the community, for all time.

Paisley may boast of having been the birth-place or residence of several individuals noted for genius or science. Wilson, the celebrated American ornithologist; and Tannahill, the lyric poet, were natives of Paisley; and the distinguished Dr. Witherspoon, long minister of one of the parishes, wrote several of his best works here, prior to his emigration. Here the celebrated John Wilson (Christopher North) was born. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a widespread fertile plain expands itself, and known by the name of "Carse of Renfrewshire"), is most agreeably diversified by gentle risings, by wood, by water, and, in short, by all the constituents of the soft and beautiful. A fall in the Cart, just above the town, and an aqueduct bridge over the canal, deserve mention.

The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays of February and May, and the second Thursday of August and November, respectively. February and August are the principal fairs for cattle; August fair and races take place at same date, and last for three days; those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants. According to the returns for 1871 the population of the town was in 1871, 48,357, and in 1851, 55,642.

LINWOOD is a pleasant village, situated on the river Cart, distant about three miles from Paisley, its post town. It is in the parish of Kilbarchan. Paper making and cotton spinning are extensively carried on here, and several coal and ironstone pits are wrought, and the manufacturing of shale oil is carried on in the neighbourhood. The religious and educational establishments are an Established church and a day school. Population in 1871, 1,250.

INKERMAN and BALACLAVA are mining villages, about two and three miles, respectively, w. from Paisley, their post town. These places sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and are named in commemoration of the two noted battles. They contain a population of over 1,000.

POLLOCKSHAW, THORNLIE BANK, KENNISHEAD,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

POLLOCKSHAW (or Pollockshaws) is a thriving manufacturing town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Eastwood, two miles and a half from Glasgow; situated on the road to Irvine, near to the White Cart river, in a pleasing valley sheltered by plantations. It consists of several well-built streets, somewhat irregular in appearance. The trade of the place is considerable, there being extensive establishments for weaving and dyeing, also bleach fields, print works, paper works, ironfoundries, and the manufacture of earthenware, altogether furnishing employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants. The town boasts a Town House (a neat building with a spire), an extensive public library, a Board school, and one for Roman Catholics. Pollockshaws was erected into a burgh of barony in 1814, in favour of Sir John Maxwell, of Pollock, and the government of the town vested in a bailie, six councillors, and a treasurer. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, are established here. A sheriff's court is held every alternate month, a justice of peace court once a month, and criminal courts once a fortnight. The places of worship are two Established churches, two Free churches, chapels for United Presbyterians, and Original Seceders, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The parish of Eastwood is four miles in length by three in breadth, bounded on the north by Govan and Cathcart, and on the south by Neilston and Mearns. The district is generally well cultivated, and abounds in freestone; and, besides the stream of the White Cart, is watered by the Auldhouse burn. The Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Railway has a station close to the town, and omnibuses run to and from Glasgow several times a day. The parish of Eastwood comprises 5,596 acres; and the population numbered in 1871, 13,098, and in 1881, 13,915. THORNLIE BANK is a village lying a little to the south of Pollockshaw in a beautiful hollow, watered by the Auldhouse burn. The manufacture of cotton is carried on here to a great extent, embracing every process from the raw material to the most beautiful printed fabrics. The United Presbyterians have a chapel here. Population in 1871, 2,123.

PORT GLASGOW AND KILMALCOLM.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport and opulent burgh of barony and regality, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, twenty miles below Glasgow, three miles (by rail two miles and a half) east from Greenock, on the Greenock section of the Caledonian line of railway. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and an extensive view of corresponding eminences presents itself on the north. The lower grounds in the vicinity of the town are embellished with handsome villas, to which are generally attached excellent gardens. The town stands immediately contiguous to the old barony and village of Newark, at the eastern extremity of which is the ancient castle formerly occupied by the barons of the name of Maxwell, now the property of Sir M. Shaw Stewart, Bart. It is a fine old ruin, in good preservation, and the situation is much admired for its commanding view of the Clyde and adjacent picturesque scenery, particularly that wild and singularly formed rocky eminence on which Dumbarton Castle stands. Port Glasgow is neatly built, the streets running at right angles. It possesses a town-house (erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000), comprising a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the accommodation of the town clerk, fiscal and other public officers; also a public reading room. This pile of buildings, which is of the finest Grecian architecture, is surmounted by an elegant spire one hundred and fifty feet in height, and adorned with a good clock. The Town Hall, situated in Princes street, is a stone structure of imposing exterior, and affords ample accommodation for public meetings, assemblies, &c. The Custom House is a handsome building and contains offices and rooms for the different officers in that branch of the revenue. The trade of this port town has been for many years gradually improving; the tonnage employed in the American trade is very considerable, and there is a fair share of Indian and general imports. It enjoys the superior advantage of an extensive wet dock, constructed at a great expense. The tide harbours, which are large and commodious, are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress, and are accessible to vessels of the largest tonnage at all times of the tide. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, the first of the kind constructed in Scotland, and which since its construction been enlarged and improved at a very considerable cost. Connected with the town are seven ship building establishments, several of them upon an extensive scale, and giving employment to many hands; there are also various branches of manufacture on a large scale established here, consisting principally of saw mills, roperies, iron and brass foundries, sail cloth factories, engineers, rivet makers, and sail and block makers.

Port Glasgow formerly belonged to the parish of Newark; in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district, and in 1775 the town was constituted a burgh of barony, and its government confided to a provost, two magistrates and seven councillors; it joins with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock in returning one member to Parliament. A burgh police court sits every Thursday, and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Through the public spirit of the inhabitants a new parish church was erected upon the site of the old one; in external appearance it is handsome, and its interior is chaste, elegant and convenient; there is also a quoad sacra parish church, three Free churches, three United Presbyterians, and a place of worship each for Episcopalians and Roman Catholics. There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Monday in July, and continues for three days. The population in 1871 was 10,833, and in 1881, 13,264.

KILMALCOLM is a village situated on the east side of the parish of its name, on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, ten miles from Paisley, seven from Greenock, and rather more than that distance from Johnstone; it is an agricultural district, intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams, whose banks are well cultivated. Consequent upon the opening of the Greenock and Ayrshire Railway, which has a station in the village, this district has become a favourite summer residence. Its situation is sheltered, and the salubrity of its atmosphere is highly spoken of. A large number of tasteful villas have been erected, whilst others are in progress. A number of shops of a superior class have been opened, and a branch of the Royal Bank is established here. There is also an excellent modern hotel (the Buchanan Arms), close to the station, which affords ample accommodation for visitors. The village is well lighted with gas, and an Hydropathic Institution is now open. Population in 1871, 895.

RENFREW, INCHINNAN, AND YOKER.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh, the capital of the county and parish of its name; 50 miles w. from Edinburgh, 13 E. by s. from Port Glasgow, 6w. from Glasgow, and 3 N. from Paisley; situated a short distance from the Clyde, and one mile east from the river Cart. In old charters the name of this place is variously written Ranfrew, Ranfrew and, as it is now spelt, Renfrew; it is composed of two British words, ren (or rhyn), a point or promontory, and frew, a flux or flow—implying a "point of land subject to be overflowed by the tide," which certainly is applicable to the local character and figure of a part of the parish. Walter, the first Stewart, built a castle here, on a small height called Castle-hill, on the margin of the bank of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewarts long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. The present town consists of one long street, from which several smaller streets issue. There are established two extensive ironfounding and engineering establishments and ship building yards, with slips capable of raising vessels of large burthens, chemical works, forge works, a dye works and a woollen cloth manufactory; these, with a distillery in operation at YOKER, are the principal establishments which come under the head of manufactures. Gas has also been introduced, and the town is well lighted. There is a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels that frequent the river can discharge and load with the same facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew Railway is connected with this wharf, where passengers embark and land from the different steam-boats navigating the Clyde, and goods are shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish, and other boats. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies, and nine councillors. It joins with Port Glasgow (and other places there named) in returning one member to Parliament. The vicinity of the town is adorned by some fine estates and manusions; of the latter, the most worthy of the stranger's notice are Elderslie, the residence of Lady Ann Spicers, and Blythwood, the seat of Sir Archibald Campbell—both situated on the banks of the Clyde, and their beauty increased by delightful plantations. A magistrate's court sits every Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May, and August, and last Tuesday in October. The places of worship are an Established church, a chapel for the United Presbyterians, a Free church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are also several good schools in the burgh. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in May and the last Friday in June. The acreage of the parish is 4,311; the population in 1871 was 5,998, and in 1881, 7,377, of which the town contained 4,825.

The parish of INCHINNAN is situated to the north-west of Renfrew; it is watered by the Clyde, the White Cart, and the Gryffe rivers. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches, forming a communication with Renfrew; to enable vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde to pass this bridge, a canal has been cut, across which is a handsome iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. Acreage, 3,330; population in 1871, 584.

ROSS & CROMARTY SHIRES.

ROSS-SHIRE.

THIS is a large section in the north of Scotland, being eighty miles in length and nearly the same in breadth (exclusive of the Island of Lewis), extending from the German Ocean to the Atlantic. On the north it is bounded by Sutherlandshire, on the south by Inverness-shire, on the east by the German Ocean and the small county of Cromarty, and on the west by the Western Sea; on the east coast the county terminates in an obtuse point, and on this side it is deeply penetrated by the Bay of Cromarty; the western shore is laid open by many gulfs or arms of the sea, the waters of which roll far within the land. From the numerous indentations made by lakes and friths, the form of Ross-shire is of the most irregular character. The main land (exclusive of Cromartyshire) is computed to contain about one million, eight hundred and fifty thousand, eight hundred acres, and Lewis Isle three hundred and fifty nine thousand; of the first number, five thousand nine hundred belong to the district of Ferintosh, a part of the county of Nairn.

SOIL, SURFACE, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western; a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is loamy clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation. Ben Wyvis is considered the most lofty, rising upwards of 3,700 feet above the level of the sea. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate of this county is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long dreary cold winters, and some very hot summer weather; the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of fir wood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted with great spirit, large additions having been in progress for many years. The improvements effected in farming within the last sixty years have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross, and indeed this portion as well as other parts of the county may now compete in the skilful management of the land with any other division in Scotland. The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little value in a directly useful point of view. Limestone occurs in several localities on the west coast, but there is a general destitution of coal throughout the county. The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings is pursued with great success on the east coast, and partially on the west.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, which flows into the Cromarty Frith, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Frith. The largest stream on the west coast is the Ewe, which has a short course from Loch Maree. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some fells of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Greinord, Loch Ewe, Gair-Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron, and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them, save Loch Maree, near the west coast, are of sufficient magnitude or beauty to excite interest. The Highland Railway intersects this county. This line presents many attractions. It traverses some of the grandest scenery in the Highlands hitherto comparatively unknown, and affords the advantage of a direct communication with the west coast. No railway route in the kingdom, and probably not even on the continent, presents within the same space of time so great a variety of fine scenery. Stromie Ferry is the terminus, from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Ross-shire comprehends thirty complete parishes, and three parts of parishes. It has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain, and Fortrose; the two former, with the town of Cromarty, join with Kirkwall, Wick, and Dornoch, in returning one member to Parliament, and the shires of Ross and Cromarty unite in sending another. The present member is Sir Alex. Matheson, Bart., of Ardross and Lochalsh. The Ross parliamentary constituency numbered, in 1881-2, 1,671. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation. The lord lieutenant is Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie, Bart., of Gairloch. According to the returns for 1871 the population of the counties of Ross and Cromarty was 80,955, namely, 38,050 males, and 42,905 females; in 1881 the figures returned were:—males, 37,007; females, 41,532; total, 78,539; which shows a decrease of 2,416 persons in the ten years. There were at the latter period 15,652 houses inhabited, 715 uninhabited, and 85 in course of erection.

CROMARTYSHIRE.

THIS county is so amalgamated with and intersected by Ross-shire, that, as is observed by respectable authorities, "there can hardly be a literary separation of the two, as there should certainly not be a political." The greater part of it lies in the "Black Isle," or that peninsula which is bounded by the Frith of Cromarty on the north, and the Moray Frith on the south and east. The length of the district is about sixteen miles, and its average breadth between six and seven; it is computed that the superficies of the land in the county amounts altogether to about three hundred and forty square miles. Cromarty is mentioned in the fifth parliament of James V., in the year 1537, as a separate county; and the same distinction is observed in subsequent legislative acts that apply to the statistical divisions of the country; yet it has still been included in the shire of Ross, and at this time the sheriff substitute holds a monthly court at Cromarty (the only town in the shire), from which the county has received its distinctive recognised title.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—Originally, and at a not distant period, the greater part of this district presented a moorish, unprofitable surface; but in recent times agricultural improvement, extensively pursued with persevering industry and skill, have materially changed its features; the soil has been rendered generally productive—planting has been introduced, and is gradually progressing. The climate is drier and the air more genial than in the further northern and more western Highland tracts; the culture of the land has contributed to the amelioration of the temperature of Cromartyshire, and its crops are in most seasons earlier than in many of the adjacent districts. Its mineral treasure is but scanty; freestone and granite comprise the only descriptions worthy of notice. The fisheries on the coast are the most productive sources of the public profit and prosperity.

CROMARTY,

RESOLIS, JAMIMAVILLE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CROMARTY is a burgh of barony, and the capital of its parish and county, 19½ miles N.E. from Inverness, 17 N.W. from Nairn, 11 S. from Tain, 9 N. by E. from Fortrose, and 8 W. by N. from Invergordon; situated upon a promontory jutting into the neck of the sea, connecting the Moray with the Cromarty Frith, and at a short distance from the entrance into a harbour esteemed one of the safest and most capacious in North Britain. In this haven vessels of any tonnage may ride in perfect security. The entrance from the sea lies between two wooded headlands, called the "Sutors of Cromarty," which almost meet and reflect each others form, producing an effect, in combination with the general scenery, eminently picturesque. The view from the hill of Cromarty is truly delightful, and is the admiration of every visitor. Beneath the south Sutor is a profound chasm, called "Macfarquhar's Bed," and a petrifying stream called the "Dripping Well," both attractive natural curiosities, never overlooked by the investigating stranger or Tourist. Near the north Sutor are seven sunken rocks, termed the "Seven Kings' Sons," so named from the circumstance (according to tradition) of seven individuals who bore that relation to royalty having been shipwrecked upon them and drowned in returning from France. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a monument, consisting of a column 40 feet high, and surmounted by a full sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller, the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," &c. who was a native of Cromarty. The execution of the work was by Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh. The herring and white fishery is prosecuted in this quarter with persevering industry and general success; large quantities are exported to foreign countries, and the remainder (with the exception of the local consumption) to the London and various home markets. The monetary transactions of the place are facilitated by branches of the Caledonian Bank and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitations of Sir John Urquhart, proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now, however, holds the rank stated in the brief description of shires, and joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornoch, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to Parliament. The parish church, an ancient building, stands at the east end of the town; a chapel for the accommodation of the Gaelic portion of the community is situated on the hill south of the town, and a Free church is the only other place of worship. Cromarty parish possessed in 1871 a population of 2,180, at the same date the village had 1,481; in 1881 the latter contained 1,352.

RESOLIS parish lies on the south side of the Cromarty Frith, and consists of a portion of the peninsula territory called the "BLACK ISLE," being eight miles long, with a breadth of three, having a coast line of about ten miles. In it is the village of JAMIMAVILLE. Population in 1871, 1,527.

DINGWALL,

STRATHPEFFER, FODDERTY, CONTIN, KNOCKBAIN, URRAY, URQUHART, KILLEARNAN, MARYBURGH, CONON BRIDGE AND AUCHTERNEED.

DINGWALL is a parish, royal burgh and market town, the latter 178 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 21 N.W. from Inverness, 20 S.W. from Cromarty, 13 S.W. from Invergordon, and 9 N. from Beaulieu; pleasantly situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain, near the western extremity of the beautiful Frith of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town. About three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier, or jetty, for the convenience of vessels in discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than it now is, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. As it now exists, Dingwall is neat and well built, and consists of one main street, well paved, and a few smaller ones; it is copiously supplied with excellent water from springs above the town, into which it is conveyed by means of pipes. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, is a curious old building with a spire and clock; and the church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. In the neighbourhood of the latter edifice is an obelisk, fifty-seven feet in height, erected to the memory of George, first Earl of Cromarty, who, eccentric at death as in life, in accordance with his last injunction was buried here. Near the town formerly stood the mansion of the powerful and noble family of Ross; a rude fragment in the garden attached to a villa is now all that remains of that once princely domicile. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II., and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Cromarty, Tain, Dornock, Wick and Kirkwall in returning one member to Parliament. The town is eligibly situated for the purpose of a more extensive trade than it enjoys; its business is chiefly of a local character, manufactures not having as yet found a seat here. In the high street of the town are several handsome and spacious hotels where the best accommodation can be obtained. In the same street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Caledonian Bank and the Bank of Scotland. A little to the east of the town stands the County Buildings, forming a very conspicuous feature in its general appearance; they were completed in 1845 at a cost of £5,000, and contain a county room, a sheriff's court room, and county clerk's and other offices, together with one of the most complete prisons for its size in the kingdom. Dingwall is surrounded by some of the most beautiful scenery in Scotland. The valley of Strathpeffer recedes to the westward, and is as lovely as any Lowland vale, while the mountains at its head present all the rude grandeur of the Highlands. The hill on the north side of the town, a beautiful wood delicately, will remind the traveller of the celebrated hill of Kinross, near Perth. About a mile and a half from Dingwall, on the road to Beaulieu, is the small village of MARYBURGH, seated on the left bank of the Conon, on the opposite side of which river is CONON BRIDGE, another little village. In the former village a handsome Free church and manse were erected in 1850. The market of Dingwall is held every alternate Wednesday, and the fairs on the third Wednesday in January, the third Wednesday in February, the first Wednesday in June, the first Tuesday in July, the first Wednesday in September and in November, and the Tuesday next before Christmas, new style. The mineral well of STRATHPEFFER, situate at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about three miles due west from Dingwall, occasioned the erection of some twenty or thirty neat villas or cottages around them for the accommodation of invalid visitors, and there are three good hotels, the Ben Wyvis being one of the largest and best appointed in the North of Scotland; it contains billiard rooms and suites of private apartments. The small hamlet of AUCHTERNEED is about two miles distant from the pump room, or public lounge, attached to the principal well, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings to strangers when their influx is great, as it generally is during the months of June, July and August. The situation of these wells is romantic, the neighbouring country being fertile and exceedingly beautiful. The springs seem to rise through the porous red sandstone, which is prevalent in this district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the north of Scotland. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, an Aberdeenshire gentleman, who was an enthusiast for their salutary virtues, affirming them to be the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by various scientific individuals, particularly by Dr. T. Thompson, in May, 1823, who analysed the waters with the most scrupulous exactness. They are strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Large additions have been recently made to the Spa establishment, which is now one of the most complete in Great Britain. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and strongly vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road through the valley passes along the property, almost exclusively, of the Duchess of Sutherland, sole heiress of the estates of Cromartie, and bounds the grounds of the ancient seat of the Cromartie family, Castle Leod, a castellated mansion, still inhabited. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the romantic and beautifully wooded knolls of Coul, the property of Sir Robt R. Mackenzie, Bart. and the manse, village, and island plain of Contin, beyond which the visitor of this district may either wander along the picturesque shores of Loch Echbittier and the sheepwalks of Comrie to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, he will be delighted with the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathpeffer. Nearer to the mineral spa, he may likewise be gratified with a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Braham Castle, the ancient and princely residence of the Seaforth family. This beautiful seat is situated below the southern slope of Knock-Farrel, and commands an extensive, magnificent and pleasingly varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the rivers Conon and Orrin. The Dingwall and Skye Railway traverses some of the finest scenery in the Highlands, and includes views of Loch Maree, Loch Carron, Loch Luichart, Strath Carron and other districts comparatively unknown, and forms a direct communication with the west coast. Tourists by this route may reach the Isle of Skye from London in thirty-six hours, and from other parts of the kingdom in proportionately less time. The terminus is at Strom Ferry, from which point steamers in connection with the railway, convey passengers to the Isles of Skye or Lewis at regularly stated times. According to the census returns for 1871, the parliamentary and royal burgh contained a population of 2,125, and by those for 1881, 1,918.

CONTIN is a parish joining Fodderty on the west. It is forty miles long by a mean breadth of thirty miles. It is distant from Dingwall seven miles. Population in 1871, 1,550.

KNOCKBAIN, a small parish, eight miles from Dingwall, is only three miles broad by five in length.

FODDERTY parish is a very long one, it being thirty miles in length by a breadth of only four miles, it joins the parish of Dingwall. Population in 1871, 2,155.

KILLEARNAN is a small parish, eight miles in length by a breadth of five miles. It is distant from Dingwall five miles. In 1871 Killearnan had a population of 1,372.

The parish of URQUHART is only two miles distant from Dingwall. It is ten miles long with a breadth of five miles, and in 1871 had a population of 2,868.

URRAY is a parish five miles distant from Dingwall. It is fifteen miles in length, with a breadth of nine miles. Population in 1871, 2,808.

FORTROSE IN ROSEMARKIE AND AVOCH.

FORTROSE is a small market town and representative burgh in the parish of Rosemarkie, 21 miles s. from Tain, 18 N.N.E. from Beaul, and 10 N. from Inverness, situated on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Frith, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant two miles and a half. Before the abolition of episcopal establishments in Scotland, Fortrose Cathedral was that of the bishopric of Ross, and this town was likewise the chief seat of learning in this quarter of that kingdom; it was mentioned in history by the title of the "Chanony of Ross." James II. in 1444 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. But small portions of the ancient cathedral now remain entire; one part of it is used as a court-house and prison, and another division is a burial place.

ROSEMARKIE is comparatively a smaller place than Fortrose, though in point of antiquity it takes the precedence as being a parish town. Between the former place and Fort George there is a regular ferry, and the town has an excellent harbour, erected by parliamentary commissioners. Fortrose enjoys every advantage for sea bathing; and there is an excellent hotel—the Royal—which affords very good accommodation, and is also a posting establishment.

The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors; and it joins with Inverness, Forres and Nairn in sending one member to Parliament.

The parish church, which is at Rosemarkie, was completed in 1821; it is in the late Gothic style, and considered to be a very handsome, well-finished building; its situation has been happily selected, and its commanding aspect on the coast uniformly attracts the particular notice of strangers. More recently a neat church has been erected at Fortrose for the Free Communion of Scotland, and there is an Episcopal chapel. The parish of Rosemarkie extends six miles in length, by three in breadth. Its situation is fine and pleasant; the hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is bold and rocky; it abounds with romantic views and frightful precipices. As the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. Fairs are held on the Mondays before Beaul Fair. The entire parish of Rosemarkie contained in 1871 a population of 1,441; of this number 612 were returned as belonging to Fortrose and 302 to the village of Rosemarkie; in 1881, Fortrose 869.

INVERGORDON,

ROSSKEEN, ALNESS, EVANTON, KILMUIR EASTER, KILTEARN, AND LOGIE.

INVERGORDON is a thriving sea-port town in the parish of Rosskeen, county of Ross, 12 miles s.w. from Tain, 13 n.n.e. from Dingwall, and 8 w. by N. from Cromarty, most eligibly seated on the north side of the fine bay of Cromarty, from whence there is a regular ferry to the opposite shore of the Frith. For the accommodation of persons crossing, a small pier was erected in 1821, partly at the expense of the county and partly with the assistance of Government, so that boats can now land their passengers at any time of the tide; but the most valuable and important improvement was conferred upon the port through the munificence and the public spirit of the proprietor, R. B. Z. M'Leod, Esq., of Cadboll, who, at his own expense, constructed an excellent harbour in 1823. This for many years, owing to the central position of the place, served for the landing of the sea-borne goods for the eastern and western parts of Ross-shire, as well as for most districts of Sutherlandshire. In 1857 the accommodation was greatly increased by the erection of large wooden piers, extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London, &c. coming alongside. The extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863, and subsequently further north, has for the present diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is perfectly commodious and safe, and capable of containing a large fleet, with anchorage of the best description, from which vessels never drive, the "Souters of Cromarty" forming a natural mouth to one great harbour. The town has undergone considerable improvements of late years, and its appearance enlivened by the erection in 1861 of a very handsome Free church, capable of accommodating nearly a thousand sitters. The body of it is cruciform in shape, and there is a spire some 140 feet high, much admired for its handsome proportions.

There are also some other excellent buildings, amongst which may be mentioned a handsome house and offices belonging to the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, also a very handsome building belonging to the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and several shops, which for elegance are not surpassed in the north of Scotland. The Town Hall was opened in April, 1871. It is a conspicuous building in the middle of the High street, in the Italian style of architecture, its most important feature being a pediment, with a beautifully sculptured group representing the god Neptune, with the accessories of the "horn of plenty" on one side and aquatic plants on the other. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town with very considerable spirit by two establishments. Nothing is now done in this branch of commerce. The principal public work is at present a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, carried on in a set of buildings covering over an acre of ground, and employing some score of workpeople. There are several comfortable inns, the principal one, the Commercial, in High street, affording the best accommodation to tourists and travellers, is an excellent house. A justice of peace court is held when necessary, and a sheriff court quarterly. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of Provost Lindsay's Police Act. About one mile from the town is Invergordon Castle, where are some fine plantations. In November, 1801, the centre of the edifice was acci-dently destroyed by fire, but in 1873-4 a very elegant structure was erected on the old site. It is in the Elizabethan style of architecture, and is much admired for its noble appearance. The parish of Rosskeen extends six miles along the Frith of Cromarty and ten inland, The parish of Alness lies on the west, and Logie on the east. The lower part of the parish, which lies along the Frith, and for about two miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. A bill called Knock-Navie or Coldhill divides the lower from the highland part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing black cattle or sheep. Like the adjacent parts of the shire, the parish has been greatly improved in agricultural capabilities, and now possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these being Invergordon Castle, above mentioned. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. Fairs are held the third Tuesday in April, the first Tuesday in August, the second Tuesday in October, and the third Tuesday in December. In 1871 the parish of Rosskeen had a population of 3,808, of this number 1,157 were returned for Invergordon.

KILMUIR EASTER is a parish five miles south from Tain, and on the west side of Cromarty Frith. Its size is about ten miles in length by four in breadth. An Established and a Free church are the places of worship. Population in 1871, 1,231.

KILTEARN is a parish six miles north-east of Dingwall, situated on Cromarty Frith. It is a large parish, being twenty miles in length, by a breadth of about six miles. An Established and a Free church are in the parish. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,496.

ALNESS is a small village, partly in the parish of its name and partly in that of Rosskeen, three miles from Invergordon, situated on both sides of the Alness (which river separates the two parishes), and on the north side of Cromarty Bay. The church is about half a mile from the village. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in this district by two large establishments. The following fairs are held in Alness:—On the second Tuesday in June, Wednesday before the third Thursday in July, and Wednesday after the third Tuesday in September. The parish of Alness in 1871 had a population of 1,053 persons, of which 911 belonged to the village.

EVANTON is a rural village, about seven miles from Invergordon and four from Alness, situate, like the two latter places, on the north side of Cromarty Bay, and sheltered by a row of trees which defend it from the sea breeze. The church is about a mile distant. About two miles to the westward is FOWLS-FERRY, used for loading grain, timber and cattle, and a mile north-east of the village is a deep ravine called "Aultgraade," supposed to have been formed as some very early period by a mighty convulsion of nature. Fairs are held in this village on the first Tuesday in June and December. Population in 1871, 526.

LOGIE is a small parish, seven miles in length and two in breadth, situated in a fine hollow on the Balnagown river. The places of worship are an Established and a Free church. Population in 1871, 912.

STORNOWAY (ISLAND OF LEWIS),

BARVAS, LOCHS, AND UIG.

STORNOWAY is a parish in the ISLAND OF LEWIS, county of Ross. The town, which has greatly increased in importance of late years, is 65 miles N. from Portree (in Skye), and 60 from Poolewea (described in a preceding page). It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 7 min., and in west longitude 6 deg. 14 min. 10 sec., at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, considered one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north or even Great Britain. The entrance to it is north and north by west, and is easy of access to vessels of any burden, at any time of the tide. A lighthouse stands on Arinish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights. Another lighthouse has been built on the Butt of Lewis by the Commissioners. The town is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre, and the streets run in direct lines. The houses are neat and well built, and being in general whitewashed, have a clean appearance. A most convenient quay, with slips and landing places, have been constructed by public subscription. A substantial wall has since been erected round the basin of the harbour. The stranger, on entering the bay, is forcibly struck with the imposing and magnificent appearance of Lewis Castle, in the Tudor and castellated style of architecture. It occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by its late proprietor, Sir James Matheson, at an outlay of £60,000. It is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds. There is also a glass conservatory, with a colonnade communicating with the castle, erected by Mr. Crauston, of Birmingham, who has patented the plan. The town, too, as seen on entering the bay, presents a pleasing aspect. From small origin, Stornoway has gradually risen to considerable importance, through the spirit and enterprise of its inhabitants, and these exertions have been effectually seconded by the present liberal proprietor; and the ample resources of this gentleman have been applied to promote both the agricultural and commercial value of the island in general, and Stornoway in particular. The Island of Lewis or Lewis next to Ireland, is the largest of the British Isles, being 45 miles in length, 15 in average breadth, and 30 in extreme breadth. It was acquired by the late Sir Jas. Matheson, Bart. of Achany, in 1814, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaford, for the sum of £190,000. Among the improvements accomplished may be mentioned the draining of two thousand acres of moor or waste land, planting several hundred acres with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding the castle, pleasure grounds and walks were tastefully laid out, ponds sunk, and drives formed. One hundred miles of old roads were thoroughly repaired, and the same distance of new ways made in various directions. Twenty-one bridges were thrown across rivers and rapid streams, in different parts of the island, and in Stornoway a patent ship was constructed at a cost of £7,000, which will draw up vessels of eight hundred tons barthen into dock for the purpose of making repairs—a great advantage to the shipowners of Stornoway and others visiting the port. The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which the salmon fishery is very productive. The months of May, June and July is the season for herring fishing, when from eight to nine hundred boats, with a complement of five hands to each boat, are employed throughout the island; and during this period four hundred tons of fish or more have been exported, consisting chiefly of cod, ling and herring. The ling and cod are caught during the winter months, and are dried and forwarded to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets, and as many as 60,000 and 70,000 barrels of herrings have been exported in one year, chiefly to the Hamburg, Stettin, and St. Petersburg markets. The herring fishing of late years has been prosecuted with considerable success, the number of boats has increased, and the boats used have been improved. Many steamers are employed in carrying the fish to the nearest railway stations at Strom Ferry and Oban, and numerous other fishing stations have been opened between the Butt of Lewis in the north, to Barra Head, in the south. At Stornoway a considerable quantity is prepared in a kippered state, and exported principally to the English markets. We may in this place be allowed to state a fact which, though at that time seemed interesting merely as a singular occurrence, involves considerations worthy of being entertained in a more important light, as creating, possibly at no distant period, another branch of marine pursuit upon our shores that has hitherto been followed only in more distant seas accompanied by extreme perils and privations, viz.—the whale fishery. On the morning of the 4th of July, 1837, a shoal of several hundreds of whales, of the bottle-nose species, came into the bay of Stornoway. The greatest bustle and activity were immediately manifested among the inhabitants, and chase was instantly commenced upon these unusual visitors. After an arduous and severe contest, twenty-eight of these leviathans of the deep were driven on shore. The writer of this article witnessed the opening of one of these enormous fish, and in the paunch were found the remains of nine fine salmon, two of which when alive could not have weighed less than twenty pounds each, and they exhibited every appearance of having been swallowed whole. Several shoals have been successfully caught since the above-mentioned period. In the spring of 1872 a whale, 63 feet in length, was taken into Stornoway harbour by some persons who had found it floating at sea.

This monster was of the sperm variety, of which few are ever seen on this coast, and attracted numbers of visitors daily. The gas works, erected in 1844, are still in operation, and manufacture on an average about 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas annually, which is sold at 12s. 1d. per 1,000 feet. Water is supplied to the townspeople at the rate of 6d. in the pound upon the rental. The streets of the burgh are well lighted with gas, and great improvements in the paving of them have recently been completed. The monetary transactions of the town are facilitated by branches of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, British Linen Co. Bank, and Caledonian Bank, which have been established in this distant quarter for many years. There are likewise agents for Lloyd's, and for several insurance companies, and three or four excellent inns; of the latter, the Imperial, the Lewis, and the Royal Hotels may be considered as exceedingly eligible establishments for families, commercial gentlemen, or for posting. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. with the design of promoting the civilization of the western isles, and has now adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A sheriff's court sits every Tuesday during sessions for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. In respect to edifices ornamental in their architecture, the buildings deserving notice are the Established, the Episcopal, the Free and United Presbyterian churches, a new building for the National Bank, Nicholson's Institution, the new post office, a commodious prison, erected in 1845, which has since been supplemented by a large and commodious court room, besides offices for the sheriff, procurator fiscal, and sheriff clerk and jury men; and a few private residences along the beach, of handsome exterior. Stornoway possesses several educational, religious and social institutions. The Nicholson Institution before mentioned is an elegant building, situated off James street, and is endowed by the late Sir James Matheson with a salary of £35 annually for the teacher. The same gentleman also contributed the site for the building and playgrounds free of charge. The Free Church school is conducted upon the plan of the Normal seminary; there is also a school for females, instituted and endowed by the proprietor and his lady, affording a thorough English education to numerous pupils, and instruction in every description of needlework. There are several other schools built and endowed by the same benevolent gentleman in various parts of the island, and one founded by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge. There are a number of societies for mutual improvement, including the Young Men's, the Juvenile, and the Free Church Young Men's Christian Association. There are also a public library and reading room; to the latter strangers are admitted free upon the recommendation of any member. The Incorporated Trades' Society (for the support of the aged and infirm) is liberally supported by its respective benevolent members. The Horticultural Society has been re-organised, and holds public competitions in flowers and vegetables in July and October. The edifice erected for the service of a masonic lodge is a handsome structure; in it are occasionally held assemblies, concerts and public meetings; in the same building is a newsroom and public library. The parish of Stornoway lies on the north-east of Lewis Island, bounded on the inland side by Barvas. It extends nineteen miles in length, by from four to seven in breadth. The surface is generally flat and moorish, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and are indented by a number of bays. In addition to the more immediate local improvements effected by the proprietor before and so often mentioned, he has facilitated the means of communication between Lewis and Stornoway with distant parts. Steamers handsomely fitted up for passengers ply daily between Glasgow and Stornoway, besides those which call at Stornoway weekly and fortnightly.

The most remarkable ancient remains in the Island of Lewis or Lewis are the Druidical standing stones or Temple of Callanish; they are forty-three in number, arranged in a cruciform manner, with a circle at the intersection from which the wings radiate, and extend north and south 600 feet with the line corresponding with the long leg of the cross. The late proprietor enclosed the circle with a neat wire fence, and the ground about it is cleared. On a lower eminence half a mile from the Callanish Temple, there is another cluster of standing stones. Throughout the Island there are various specimens, single and in fours, of these standing obelisks, probably erected as memorials, and there is a cave at Gress 200 feet in length, which is comparatively unknown to the inhabitants. At MEALISTAN UIG, not far from the shrine of St. Cattan are the remains of a nursery which has found no name in history, but is still designated by a Gaelic name commemorative of the abode of the sable sisterhood. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered some years ago upward of sixty ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently of very ancient manufacture; they were about four inches long, partly stained of a beetroot colour, and from their variety in form and shape were probably designed and shaped as chessmen. The population of the whole of the Island of Lewis was in 1881, 25,415, of this number 10,323 belonged to the parish of Stornoway.

TAIN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF EDDERTON, FEARN, KINCARDINE, NIGG AND TARBAT, AND THE VILLAGES OF ARDGAY AND PORTMAHOMACK.

TAIN is a parish, a royal burgh, and a market town, 46 miles N. from Inverness, and 26 N. by E. from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Frith of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea several ferries are established, and near its head an iron bridge crosses it. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Baldnet, signifying "the town of St. Duthac" (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. The church, which was founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, and was an elegant structure, is now in a state of melancholy dilapidation. St. Duthac seems to have been a saint who enjoyed a considerable reputation in Scotland in the 15th century, as records state that James IV. once made a pilgrimage on foot from Falkland, in Fife, to his shrine at the church of Tain, for the expiation of some offence. He travelled with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land, with other immunities. The inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss, within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but of late years it has received improvements and additions by the erection of many good houses and buildings for public use; among the latter is a new Court House, surmounted by pinnacles, and presenting a handsome appearance, a large hall for assemblies and public meetings, and a very handsome hotel (the Royal), the churches, and the Royal Academy. The last-named, which is agreeably situated in an open park at the west end of the town, and is a superior educational institution, was founded by Royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1812, the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription. The courses of education are conducted by a rector, with a classical master and assistants. The Court House, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors; in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames; the new Court House is erected on its site. The trade of Tain is of the usual character found in country towns where manufactures have not appeared. The most prominent branches are distilling and woollen manufacturing. There are two banking houses established here—branches respectively of the British Linen Company and of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors; and unites with Cromarty and other contributory burghs (named under that town) in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held in Tain every Tuesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church—a handsome building erected in 1844—and an United Presbyterian church. The first-mentioned edifice is of considerable dimensions—in form quadrangular, with a castellated tower at each corner, which, not rising above the main body of the building, renders the general appearance of the whole more massive than elegant. The parish of Tain extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Frith, by a breadth of 4 miles inland. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west rather hilly. The district is tolerably well wooded, much improved by agricultural operations, and, upon the whole, of a pleasing appearance. The sea-shore is flat and sandy. The Highland Railway passes through Tain, and has a station here. The principal markets are held on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in July, on the Wednesday after the third Tuesday in August, and on the third Tuesday in October; and corn markets are held on every other Friday. In 1871 the parish of Tain had a population of 8,221, and in 1881, 9,009; of this number the village possessed 1,742.

PORTMAHOMACK is a small sea-port and fishing village in the parish of TARBAT, 10 miles E. from Tain; situated on the north coast. The parish is $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles long and $4\frac{1}{2}$ wide. Its form is generally peninsular, and gradually diminishes in width until it terminates in a point at Tarbat Ness, which divides the Dornoch and Moray Friths, and on which there is an elegant lighthouse, with a revolving light. Population in 1871 of the parish of Tarbat, 2,182, and in 1881, 1,877.

FEARN is a parish, bounded on the North by Tain, on the West by Logie, and the South by Nigg. The village of Fearn is 5 miles S.W. from Tain. Length and breadth of the parish, each about 2 miles. Loch Eye, a fine sheet of water, nearly two miles in length, is in this parish. There is an Established and a Free church, and several public schools in the parish. The Highland Railway Company have a station here. Population in 1871, 2,135.

EDDERTON is a parish, bounded on the north by Kincardine, on the south by Tain, on the east by the Frith of Dornoch, and on the west by Kilmuir. It is 9 miles long by 4 miles broad. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in this parish by a large establishment. In 1871 Edderton had a population of 860, and in 1881, 789.

NIGG is a parish north of Cromarty, and separated from it by the opening of the Cromarty Frith, having a length of six miles, with a breadth of from 2 to 3. A third of the parish consists of its most interesting physical feature, the Hill of Nigg, rising to a height of 500 feet. From the highest point nine counties may be seen by the naked eye. Nigg includes the fishing villages of SHANDWICK and BALNABRUACH. The parish of Nigg in 1871 had a population of 1,201, and in 1881, 1,000.

ARDGAY is a village in the parish of KINCARDINE, and one mile from Bonar Bridge, situated on the north border of Ross-shire. It has a commodious inn, called the Balnagown Arms, where every comfort will be found. A deed was granted in the year 1686 to erect the village into a burgh of barony, but the deed was never carried into effect. Population of the parish of Kincardine in 1871, 1,685 and in 1881, 1,472.

ULLAPOOL,

LOCHBROOM AND COIGACH.

ULLAPOOL is a seaport and fishing village in the parish of Lochbroom, 61 miles w. by N. from Inverness, 50 N.W. by w. from Dingwall, and 80 N.E. from Poolewe, situated on the west coast of Ross-shire, on the north side of an extensive inlet of the sea, called Loch Broom, and is overhung by a long rugged precipitous face of rock. It was begun to be built under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1783, and has been gradually increasing since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay for the use of vessels. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. In Ullapool a very handsome hotel has been erected, and there is also a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited. The nearest railway station at present is Garve, on the Dingwall and Skye railway. The chief trade of the place is the herring fishery, which is the main dependence of its inhabitants. Prodigious shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they pass on towards the south, and do not strike into the lochs and arms of the sea as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for, great preparations made, and considerable expense incurred by the poor people, to profit by their expected bounty. When the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast, and even from Ireland, by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The want of good roads in this district has been an inconvenience long felt by the inhabitants of the circumjacent country. The late Hugh Mackenzie, Esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of the Marchioness of Stafford. The late Sir James Matheson, Bart. conferred great benefits on Stornoway and other parts of Lewis, by his spirited and costly improvements in roads, &c. Ullapool is crowded in summer by sportsmen from all parts to enjoy the fishing and shooting. There is a small grouse shooting box attached to the hotel, which has added to the many attractions already in the village.

The parish church is situated at the head of Loch Broom, and was built in 1844. There is a quoad sacra church with a district attached it was erected into a parish quoad sacra in 1859. A free church is also situated in the village. A justice of peace court for the recovery of small debts is held occasionally in the village. In 1871 the parish of Lochbroom possessed a population of 4,406; of this number 960 belonged to Ullapool.

PARISHES OF GAIRLOCH (WITH VILLAGES OF POOLEWE, AULTBEA, & KINLOCHWE), APPLECROSS (WITH VILLAGE OF SHIELDAIG), LOCHCARRON (WITH VILLAGE OF JEANTOWN), KINTAIL (WITH VILLAGE OF DORNIE), LOCHALSH (WITH VILLAGE OF PLOCKTON), GLENSHIEL, & STROME FERRY.

GAIRLOCH parish is about 40 miles in length by 33 in breadth, and abounds in mountains, lochs, heaths, &c. For beauty of scenery and abundance of game of all descriptions it is, perhaps, unsurpassed by any other district in the north. An Established and two Free churches, together with several schools, are in the parish. There is also a branch of the Caledonian Bank at Gairloch. Population in 1871, 5,048.

POOLEWE is a small village in the parish of Gairloch, 64 miles w. from Dingwall, and about the same distance s.e. from Stornoway, situated at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds, still in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. It was erected into a burgh of barony in 1619, and a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great seal, erecting the burgh of Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a burgh of barons; and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies, &c.; and not only of keeping burrough courts for the good government of the burrough, and the administration of justice to the inhabitants, and all others concerned, but of creating burgesses, levying the burrough duties, buying and selling merchandise as practised in other burroughs in the kingdom, and planting artizans, keeping weights and measures, and levying customs, anchorage, &c. after the manner of other royalities; of having a market cross, a Saturday market once a week, and a public market once a year, under the name of Michaelmas market, beginning September 29th, and continuing four days. It does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter, as far as the burgh of Clive was concerned. It is very probable that the proprietor of Gairloch may have desired to introduce trade and commerce into the country, and had "planted artizans" at Poolewe, and obtained this charter to encourage the settling of others. However this may be, Poolewe at the present day has no evidence of the success of such an attempt. The proprietor, John of Gairloch, may have attempted such favourite schemes, but it appears that his successor, Alexander, did not carry them out. John died 11 years after the granting of the charter, and Alexander eight years later, leaving a son, Kenneth, a minor. Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, and is a quoad sacra parish; a quoad sacra church and a Free church are the places of worship. In Poolewe and the neighbouring districts are several schools for the education of the young; the school at BUALNALUIP is one of the finest erections for educational purposes in any rural parish in the north of Scotland; it was erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie, Esq. The only station on the west coast for curing salmon, grilse and trout is that at Poolewe, which is carried on to a great extent by Messrs. Hogarth & Co., of Aberdeen. Poolewe is about two miles from Loch Maree, which abounds with fish. This lake contains twenty-four islands; some of these are but little raised above water, and are covered with scattered firs, and with thickets of birch, alder and holly; while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels. The northern margin of the loch presents a variety of close shore scenery consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by noble overhanging cliffs and mountains; in one place the remains of a fir forest, in a situation almost incredible, produces a style of landscape that might be expected among the Alps, but not within the more confined scope and lower arrangements of Scottish mountains. This lake is eighteen miles in length, and from three to four in breadth; one of the islands is called Maree, from which the water takes its name; tradition says that some noble personages from Norway were buried here.

Loch Maree is the property of Sir Kenneth S. M'Kenzie, Bart., of Gairloch. Into the inner part of Loch Ewe (or Ew, or Eu) pours the river Ewe, which is scarcely two miles in length, and is the natural outlet from Loch Maree; the river has a rapid turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. Nearly two centuries ago an extensive iron furnace was in operation near Poolewe, but its fires became extinguished after consuming the greater part of the timber around it. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Syke Railway there is regular communication by coach from the hotel at ACHNASHEEN station to KINLOCHWE, GAIRLOCH, and POOLEWE. Two large hotels are on this route, one at TALLADALE and another at GAIRLOCH, for the accommodation of tourists. The population of Poolewe is included in that of Gairloch.

KINTAIL parish is bounded on the north and west by Lochalsh, on the south by Glenshiel, and on the east by Kilmorack. It is altogether a very mountainous district. In the village of DORNIE, in the above parish, has been erected, through the munificence of the late Duchess of Leeds, a beautiful Roman Catholic chapel, with schools attached. Population in 1871, 753.

APPLECROSS is a parish in the highlands of West Ross, on Applecross Bay. Its size is about 15 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton. The scenery in some parts of this parish is the finest in Ross-shire. Population of Applecross in 1871, 2,470.

GLENSHIEL is a parish near Loch Duich. In size it is 16 miles in length, by a breadth of two miles. Loch Duich is one of the finest sea lochs in Scotland. Population in 1871, 463.

LOCHCARRON is a parish on Loch Carron, its size being 14 miles in length, its breadth five miles. The principal village is Jeantown, near the head of the loch, and about three miles from the railway station of STRATHCARRON, on the Dingwall and Skye Railway. It has a good hotel, and a branch of the Caledonian Bank. In 1871 the population was 1,629.

ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS county, which lies on south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded by Northumberland on the east, Dumfries-shire on the south-west, by the county of Selkirk on the west, by Berwickshire on the north, and by Northumberland and part of Cumberland on the south. The figure of the county is extremely irregular; it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of forty miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about thirty miles. The area of the shire contains 670 square miles, or 428,494 acres, rather less than one half of which is brought into cultivation. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles.

EARLY HISTORY, &c.—At the time of the Cristian epoch, the western and greater part of Roxburghshire was uninhabited by the Gadenii, while the eastern and lesser districts were occupied by the Ottadini, who had numerous strongholds in the shire, ruins and traces of which are still visible. The district is also intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and the whole shire presents a field of the greatest interest to the antiquary and the historian. There is another class of antiquities belonging to the county worthy of notice and inspection—these are towers or castles; among them are the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh, Hermitage Castle (in Liddesdale), and other similar structures of minor celebrity. The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose, and Kelso. From its situation on the confines of the two kingdoms, Roxburghshire suffered severely throughout the various border wars; and few were so distinguished in the conflicts of the middle ages as the "men of Teviotdale," many of whom followed David, in 1128, to "the Battle of the Standard," in which they fought by his side, and shared his misfortune. During these fierce aggressions, the marches of the kingdom were at different periods contracted and extended (this district being occasionally wholly or partly under English domination), till the year 1357, when the borders were finally settled as they then happened to lie; and by this arrangement Roxburghshire was for ever attached to Scotland.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—The southern parts of Roxburghshire are very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat; in many instances, however, the hilly grounds rise in beautiful swells from the rich valleys at their base; the aspect of the country is thus finely diversified in respect to surface and elevation, while the beauty of the district is greatly enhanced by the clear rivers and brooks which flow through the different vales. The following are the principal mountains and eminences, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tindhope Fell, 1,890; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruterlaw, 1,460; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the country is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile; in some parts a rich loam prevails, in others, gravel and clay, in various proportions; the heavy clayey soil occupying the higher grounds, while the valued loam is generally found on low and level tracts, near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land; but for a country so mountainous, the proportion of heath and moss is inconsiderable. It has been ascertained that so early as the twelfth century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress in the manufacture of grain. Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and it is a matter of certainty that they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. In later times Roxburghshire has kept pace with the other counties in those extraordinary improvements in the management of the soil and the rearing of stock for which Scotland in general is now distinguished. The mineralogy of the shire is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland; but though wrought for some time was ultimately abandoned as unprofitable; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern portion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but not one of them was conducted on a scale adequate to the importance of the object, and the inhabitants are still supplied with this valuable fossil from Dumfries-shire, Lothian, or Northumberland. The manufactures of Roxburghshire are not extensive; if a staple of the county may be particularised, it is that of articles manufactured from wool, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, where flannels, blankets, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively manufactured. The county contains many elegant mansions and beautiful seats, one of the most interesting of these is Abbotsford, the seat of the late eminent novelist, Sir Walter Scott; it is a fine Gothic castle, the internal and external decorations of which characterise it as having been the residence of the poet, the antiquary, and the man of superior and refined taste. But not to the mansion was the cultivated taste and judgment of the poet confined. He covered his extensive property with the most skillfully disposed and thriving plantations, and by his improvements induced others to contribute to ornament that beautiful portion of the valley of the Tweed.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are beautiful and interesting, and their tributaries numerous. The noble Tweed enters the county near the influx of the Etrick, winds through the fertile vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of thirty miles receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot, and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, is a lovely river; it passes through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from thirty to forty miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Keule waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddle rises in and runs through the parish of Castleown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of four or five miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddle are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers have their origin in this county; after which they enter England, and fall into the sea at Tyne-mouth and Coquet Isle. The waters of Roxburghshire, while useful and ornamental to the country through which they glide, possess considerable interest to both the antiquary and the poet, from the associations connected with their streams; for, besides being frequently mentioned in the pages of history, they have elicited laudatory strains from the Scottish lyrists, among the rest those of the author of "The Seasons." The principal railway line in connection with this county is the North British, with its several branches.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—The county of Roxburgh comprises thirty entire parishes, and five parts of parishes; it contains only one royal burgh—Jedburgh—which, in connection with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Lauder, returns one member to Parliament, and the county sends another. The present member for the county is the Hon. Arthur Ralph Douglas Elliot. The parliamentary constituency in 1831-82 was 2,081. The lord lieutenant is the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry, &c. In 1871 the population was returned as 53,974—25,738 males, and 28,236 females; in 1881 the number was 53,445, viz.: 25,427 males, and 28,018 females, a decrease in the ten years of 529. The number of inhabited houses in the shire at the latter period was 10,208; uninhabited, 501; in course of erection, 76.

ANCRUM AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ANCRUM is a small village in the united parish of ANCRUM and LONGNEWTON 12 mil. s. w. from Kelso, 11 E. from Hawick, and 4 N. from Jedburgh; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, and about three miles from the Hawick branch of the North British Railway. Ancrum House, the residence of Sir William M. Scott, Bart. stands in a delightful position, and commands some beautiful picturesque prospects; the trees in the park are considered the oldest and finest in this part of the country. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of Thomson, author of "The Seasons;" one of the caves just mentioned is still pointed out, in which, it is said, he frequently retired to indulge his reveries, and on that account is called "Thomson's Cave;" his name is carved on the roof, by it is supposed, his own hand. Mount Teviot, one of the seats of the Marquis of Lothian, is also in the parish. Dr. Buchan, the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," and other medical works, was born in this village. The parish stretches six miles along the north side of the river Teviot, and its breadth is about four miles. A part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. The population of the parish in 1871 was 1,391; acreage, 10,295. Ancrum village numbers 412 inhabitants.

WITH THE PARISH OF CAVERS.

DENHOLM is a small village in the parish of CAVERS, five miles from Jedburgh, and the same distance from Hawick, pleasantly situated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a neat stone bridge, erected in 1894. Leading up towards the hills from a "holm" of meadow is a richly wooded "den" or ravine, which presents a series of romantic views, and from which Denholm takes its name. The village was much improved some years since, at a considerable expense, by James Douglas, Esq. of Cavers. The greater proportion of the inhabitants are stocking weavers, and others are engaged in rural pursuits. Many are also employed in the stone quarries adjoining the village. This parish contains an Established church, a Free church church, a chapel for Independents, and three public schools. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. The celebrated Dr. Leyden was born here, and a monument has been erected to his memory in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower, which is in a fine state of cultivation, declines into rich arable field. In 1871 the population of Denholm was 659.

CAVERS is a parish of very irregular figure, and of considerable extent, and consists of two detached portions on the southern side of the Teviot. The upper portion is separated from the lower one by Hawick and Kirkcaldy parishes. Cavers contains 18,264 acres, and in 1871 the population numbered 1,443.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY.

HASSENDAEN Station, on the North British Line, is one and three quarter miles from

HAWICK,

HOBKIRK, KIRKTON, MINTO, ROBERTON, TEVIOT HEAD AND WILTON.

HAWICK is a thriving manufacturing town, a free burgh of regality, and capital of its parish, 50 miles s. by e. from Edinburgh, 20 s.w. from Kelso, 11 s. from Selkirk, and 45 s. from Carlisle, situated on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley branch line of the North British Railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. It is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot. By the former river the town is divided into nearly two equal parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of WILTON, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included in the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one erected in 1865, besides one of timber. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt. One of its most destructive conflagrations occurred in 1570, when it was set fire to by the English under Lord Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton, bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets and minor thoroughfares extending from it. The town is generally well paved, but considerable improvements in this department are being made. It is very well lighted; the water supply, for many years defective, was in 1865 considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot five miles above the town. The water is excellent in quality, and in quantity is amply sufficient for the requirements of the population. A thorough system of drainage has, since the introduction of the water supply, been carried out. The public buildings are the Town Hall, the Chamber of Commerce, which are situated in High street, and the Exchange; the latter is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. The environs of Hawick are much admired by strangers; but the improvement of the neighbourhood is much retarded by the territory being held under strict entail, which prevents gentlemen of fortune from settling in this part of the country and embellishing its natural loveliness. The banks of the Teviot are extremely picturesque and delightful, and the approach to the town from the south can be scarcely surpassed for beauty; the extensive nursery grounds, which are so celebrated throughout the kingdom, are in the immediate vicinity of the town, and materially heighten the general effect of the scenery. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conducted to the increase of the population, and the consequent augmentation of buildings. Some of the residences of the manufacturers are on a scale which quite outstrip the mansions of the country gentry. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1545, by James, Douglas Comes de Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May of the same year this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two bailies, and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing town council, made application to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and town clerk, and besides acting as custodians of the burgh property exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established. The burgh enjoys all the privileges of a royal one, except that of returning members to Parliament. It has a great annual festival, "The Common Riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries. It originated, according to tradition, from the circumstance of some young men of the town having, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), surprised a party of marauding English, during the night, about two miles below the town, and, after slaying the greater part of them, took possession of their colour; a fac-simile of this colour or ensign is now borne by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the occasion, and dubbed with the title of "Cornet," who accompanies the authorities in possession round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. Hawick is one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a high reputation. A few blankets are also made. In the tanning of leather and dressing of sheep-skins there are several houses engaged. Four banking agencies are settled here, namely the British Linen Company's Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The commerce and general trade of the place has received some improvement from the facility of communication with distant parts by railway transit. One of the principal hotels here, called The Tower, situated in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not consumed by the forces of Sussex; at a more recent period it was the frequent residence of the celebrated Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and Monmouth. There are places of worship of the Establishment, the Free church, and for various religious denominations—a list of these, with their officiating ministers, is given in a subsequent page. The establishment of several institutions evinces a taste for literary pursuits and useful knowledge; among these are a circulating library and public reading room, liberally furnished with London and provincial papers; there is also a flourishing Archaeological Society, with which is connected a museum, rich in memorials of the ancient history of the border, and other antiquarian relics and curiosities. A new combination poorhouse was erected in 1857, at a cost of £4,000; it will accommodate one hundred and thirty-three inmates. A farmers' club, or agricultural society, was formed here in 1776. Another club of the same kind, "The Teviotdale," was established in 1859. There is also the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1855, which has an annual exhibition of live stock. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every Monday. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, the 21st of September, and the 8th of November; any of these days happening on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses and cattle are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. Hawick parish comprises an area of 6,112 acres. The town of Hawick with Wilton contained in 1871 a population numbering 11,356, which in 1881 had increased to 16,184.

HOBKIRK, or HOPEKIRK, is a mountainous parish, 7 miles from Hawick, 11 miles long, and about one and a half in breadth; it adjoins the parishes of Cavers, Bedrule, Southdean, Castletown and Kirkton. Acreage, 16,195. Population in 1871, 718.

KIRKTON is a parish, 3 miles from Hawick, about 8 miles long, and about one and a half broad, adjoining Cavers, Hobkirk and Hawick. Acreage, 6,202. Population in 1871, 820.

MINTO is a parish, 5 miles from Hawick, about 5½ miles long, and its greatest breadth about three miles; bounded by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers, Wilton, and the county of Selkirkshire. Acreage, 5,602. Population in 1871, 431.

ROBERTON is a parish 5 miles from Hawick, partly in Roxburghshire, and partly in Selkirkshire, bounded by Yarrow, Selkirk, Ashkirk, Wilton, Hawick, Dumfriesshire and Ettrick. It is 13 miles long and about 5 broad, and is very mountainous. Acreage, 29,419. Population in 1871, 598.

WILTON is a parish adjoining Hawick; the greatest portion of its houses, factories, &c. forms a portion of the town of Hawick, and nearly all its social interests are identified with that town. Acreage, 8,760. Population returned with Hawick.

JEDBURGH,

BEDRULE, CRAILING, HOWNAM, OXNAM AND SOUTHDEAN.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the capital of its parish, and the county town; 46 miles S.E. from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 19 s. by w. from Kelso, the same distance S. by E. from Hawick, and 12 s. from the English border; a scrubby situate on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with werth, the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of Jedworth, or Jedworth; in course of time it became pervaded by its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained, by pronouncing it Jeddart, or Jethart, which are almost exclusively used by the common people. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with excellent water. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved and many new buildings have been erected. The principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town is the abbey, which stands upon a piece of ground between the houses and the river. Although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnificence and grandeur. To preserve this venerable edifice from the destruction towards which it was hastening, it several years since received considerable repairs, which were so judiciously conducted as not to interfere with or alter the original design of the structure, which is of the thirteenth order. It was founded for canons regular by David I. It runs from east to west, and appears to have been originally three storeys in height; the nave from the tower, and the south front, are mostly entire, but there is no roof on any part of it. The tower, which is still standing in tolerable good preservation, is about 120 feet in height. Among the other prominent public buildings of Jedburgh are the Gaol and Bridewell, the Town Hall and the Corn Exchange; the first named is designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress. It is a fine erection, in the castellated style, and its internal accommodation and arrangements are upon the most approved system. From its elevated situation it is seen at a considerable distance, and from its summit a delightful view is obtained. The Town Hall is a commodious edifice, built in 1811. The Corn Exchange is situated in Exchange street. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedence, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the £10 constituents resident within the royalty. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk), generally in April and October; and the sheriff holds a court on Mondays and Thursdays for the despatch of civil business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court every Thursday. The justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month; and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Lauder in returning one member to Parliament. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings, &c. is carried on to a considerable extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable emolument is derived from the sale of the produce of the orchards and gardens that surround the town. There are places of worship belonging to the Establishment, the Free Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterian body, Independents, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics. In connection with the town flourishes a horticultural society. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday

NENTHORN, EDNAM, MAKERSTOUN, ROXBURGH, SMALHOLM, SPROUSTON, AND STITCHEL.

KELSO is a burgh of barony, a considerable market town, and the capital of its parish, 42 miles s.e. from Edinburgh, 10 n. from Jedburgh, 23 s.w. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 n. by E. from Carlisle, and 6 w. from the English border. It is connected with the North British and the Newcastle and Berwick Railways by branches which approach within a short distance of the town, and it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed, opposite the confluence of the Teviot with that river, and surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history. Its border situation subjected it to almost continual incursions of enemies, and to several confiscations. To the latter infliction, however, it is indebted for the modern and uniform style which now characterises its appearance. It is built after the manner of the Flemish towns, having a spacious square in the centre, from which diverge four principal streets. On the east side of the square stands an elegant town hall, erected in 1816, which is adorned with a fine portrait of the late Duke of Roxburgh. In this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace, and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the commissioners of police, and the incorporated trades and friendly societies of the town. On the ground floor is a large enclosed piazza, which, on market days, is opened for the use of the farmers and others attending the market. In the Wood Market has been erected a very elegant Corn Exchange, which has proved a great boon to the farmers and merchants. The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the present century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a model. It consists of five arches of equal span, and is well worthy of the stranger's notice, particularly from the beautiful views obtained from it, which are not surpassed on any other part of the Tweed. On the north bank is Fiers Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburgh, and on the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George H. S. Douglas, Bart. In the centre may be seen the ancient castle of Roxburgh, with the Eildon hills in the distance, while on the right hand are the venerable remains of Kelso Abbey, founded by David I. in 1128. This magnificent ruin is of Saxon or early Norman architecture with the exception of four central arches, which are Gothic, and is a splendid specimen of its style. During the repairs of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, on removing the rubbish from the base of the structure, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been when perfect about 3 feet in diameter and one ton and a half in weight. At the east end of the town is situated Shadden Park, which was presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, and her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin. The government of the town is vested in a senior and two junior magistrates and a body of commissioners of police, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with spring water, and of all the towns on the border stands pre-eminent for its cleanly and orderly appearance. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive manure manufactory, an iron foundry and engineering works. There are also many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is well supported, and many of the shops are furnished with very extensive stocks of all sorts of goods necessary for the consumption of an inland district. The trading and monetary interests of the town are aided in their transactions by the establishment of five banking houses, branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the British Linen Company's Bank, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The principal hotel is the Cross Keys. There are several places of worship in Kelso, exclusive of the Established church. Their designations, &c. are given in a subsequent page. Among the several benevolent institutions supported by the inhabitants may be enumerated the dispensary, founded in 1777, which possesses hot and cold baths, a society for educating poor boys, a public grammar school, and others. The literary institutions include several libraries and a news and reading room, a literary and polytechnic institution, an association entitled the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society; a society composed of the noblemen and gentlemen residing in this quarter, styled the Bowmen of the Border (instituted in the year 1765); and several benefit societies. Three newspapers are published in Kelso, under the titles of the Kelso Mail (established in 1797), the Kelso Chronicle (in 1830), and the Kelso Courier. Kelso, which is at all times a place of gaiety and respectability, has additional brilliancy imparted to it by the occasional rendezvous of the Royal Caledonian Hunt, and by the horse races which take place in the autumn, they being superior to any meetings of the kind in Scotland. The course, which is much admired, is situated about a mile to the northward. On it is an excellent stand on the model of that at Doncaster. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, is held on Friday, and from October to June a market for cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight on Monday. An annual fair also takes place on the 5th of August. Acreege of the parish, 5,884; population in 1871, 5,121, and in 1881, 5,234, of which the town contained 4,686.

EDNAM (or Edenharn) is a small village and parish, the former pleasantly situated on the small river Eden, about two miles and half north-east from Kelso. It is celebrated as the birth-place of the poet Thomson, his father having been incumbent of the parish a monument, erected to the memory of the poet, stands on an eminence near the village. The principal trade establishment in this village is an extensive brewery. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is exceedingly cultivated and enclosed. Acreege of the parish, 3,849; population in 1881, 617.

MAKERSTOUN is a small agricultural parish on the north bank of the river Tweed, bounded on the east by Kelso, on the north by Smalholm, and on the west by Mertoun, distant from Kelso five miles. The nearest railway stations are at Rutherford and Roxburgh. Acreege, 2,335; population in 1881, 331.

NENTHORN is a parish in Berwickshire, but abutting on Roxburghshire, about four miles from Kelso, two from Stitchel, seven from Earlston, and about the same distance from Greenlaw; situated on a gentle slope from the river Eden, its length is about four miles, and about the same in width. Acreege, 3,154; population in 1881, 453.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, situate about three miles from Kelso, bounded by Makerstoun and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, Ancrum on the south, and Crailing and Eckford on the east, and is a station on the North British Railway. Acreege, 7,781; population in 1881, 1,012.

SPROUTON is a small agricultural village and parish, situate about six miles from Kelso, and in the north-eastern part of the county. The nearest railway is at Farn Lomond, about four miles from the village. Acreege, 4,181; population in 1881, 415.

STITCHEL is a parish and village situate about two and a half miles from Kelso, on the south bank of the river Tweed. The North British Railway passes through the parish, and there is a station here. Acreege, 8,645; population in 1881, 1,026.

TEVIOT is a small village and parish situate about three miles from Kelso, and the same distance from Hume, and is bounded on the east by Eccles, on the north by Greenlaw, and on the south by Ednam and Nenthorn. Stitchel House, in this parish, is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. Acreege, 6,593; population in 1881, 342.

LILLIESLEAF, BOWDEN AND MIDLEM.

LILLIESLEAF is a village and parish, the former 10 miles from Galashiels, the same distance from Jedburgh, 8 from Hawick, 6 from Selkirk, 3 from New Belses station, and 4 from Hassenden station on the North British Railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and trades connected therewith. The parish, which is four miles in length by nearly three in breadth, is intersected by the Ale water. The lands are under good tillage, and the district has a very pleasing appearance. Acreage of the parish, 6,673; population in 1871, 788, and of the village, 349.

BOWDEN village is 2½ miles from Melrose, standing in a low situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed. The parish comprises a portion of the Eildon hills, from whence the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. The vestiges of a Roman military road, with circular stations or encampments, may be traced in this district, and a ruin at HOLYDEAN, at an early period a strong fortification, and the ancient residence of the now noble family of Roxburgh. Within the parish, besides Bowden, is the small village of MIDHOLM, or Midlem, pleasantly situated on a rising ground, two miles from Lilliesleaf. Acreage of Bowden parish, 7,667; population in 1871, 842.

MELROSE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF NEWSTEAD, GATTONSIDE, DARNICK, NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MELROSE is a parish and free burgh of barony. The town, small and ancient, is 36 miles s. by e. from Edinburgh, 12 s.w. from Jedburgh, 7 n.e. from Selkirk, and 4 s.e. from Galashiels; delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon hills, and on the line of the North British Railway. The station, a spacious and handsome erection, presents a very fine appearance, and being situated on rising ground, may be seen from all parts of the neighbourhood. The town is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading out at the corners. In the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey. There are a number of new and handsome houses, in the western suburbs, while others exhibit proofs of great antiquity, presenting decorated stones that once undoubtedly formed a portion of the superb abbey for which the place is so celebrated. The Corn Exchange stands in the Market place; it is a handsome structure and contains an elegant hall, capable of accommodating an audience of about 500. There are three hotels and posting houses in the town, namely the Abbey, the George, and the King's Arms. An iron suspension bridge over the Tweed, for foot passengers, leads to the village of Gattonside, on the opposite bank of the river. The Abbey of Melrose, one of the largest and most magnificent Gothic structures in the kingdom, adjoins the town on the south side of the Tweed. On viewing the exterior of this noble pile of building from the south it has a most imposing effect; but on entering the interior, the lofty Gothic columns, in a double row, supporting the majestic arched roof—the elegance and variety of its sculpture, the multiplicity of its statues, the beauty of its stone, and the symmetry of its parts must strike every stranger with profound admiration. It was founded in 1136 by King David, who dedicated it to the Virgin Mary, and endowed it with extensive privileges and almost princely revenues. The monks were of the Cistercian order, and this monastery was the mother foundation of all establishments of that order in Scotland. It is somewhat remarkable that it is only within the limit of the present century that Melrose Abbey became an object of interest to the tourist. That interest was principally awakened by the publication of the “Lay of the last Minstrel,” a poem by Sir Walter Scott, whose description of this venerable time-recalling fabric induced the visits of strangers from all quarters. At the beginning of the present century, and until the erection of the present church on the Weirhill, the abbey was used as the parish church. There are churches belonging to the Free church, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Independent denominations. About two miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey of the Culdees settled in this part of the kingdom. All that remains, however, of the old structure, is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks around it are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river like battresses; the situation is in the highest degree pleasant, commanding a fine view of the valley of the Tweed. About a mile nearer the town of Melrose is the village of NEWSTEAD, near which was another abbey, called the “Red Abbey.” About a mile north of Melrose is the Waverley Hydropathic Establishment, a noble and stately building. The situation is dry and airy, and well sheltered from the prevailing westerly winds. It commands a splendid view to the south and east, including the romantic three-peaked Eildon hills, and some beautiful stretches of the river Tweed, the valley of which lies open as far as Leaderfoot, and the view is bounded by the heights of Bemersyde. The site of the building is the well-known Kirkcubbin Hill, where was fought one of the last Border frays of the district. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality; but now it is a free burgh of barony, and governed by a baron bailie chosen by the burgesses. A justice of peace court is held here on the first Saturday in every month. The banks of the Tweed are clothed with plantations in the finest order, and the land around appears in the highest state of cultivation. The Roxburgh, Selkirk, and Berwickshires District Lunatic Asylum, a large handsome building, erected at a cost of £45,000, situated on Bowden Moor, about a mile distant, was opened in May, 1872. It is designed to accommodate between 200 and 300 patients. Acreage of the parish, 25,794. Population of the town in 1871, 1,405, and in 1881, 1,550.

The antique and rural village of GATTONSIDE stands on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, with which town a communication is maintained by means of the suspension bridge. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. Population in 1871, 333.

DARNICK is a small village in Melrose parish, situated on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town. In the centre of the village stands the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, the exquisite bit of border antiquity, Darnick Tower. Population in 1871, 435.

NEW CASTLETON

Is a modern village, in an extensive mountainous parish, formerly known by the name of Castletown, but more generally by the popular title of Liddesdale, being in the vale of the Liddle water. The village, which owes its rise to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch, and which has superseded the old parish village (a little further up the vale), is 26 miles from Jedburgh, 20 s.e. from Hawick, and 10 n.e. from Canonby; situated in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale. It consists principally of two long streets of neat houses, which occupy a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle. Except that a few of the inhabitants are employed by the cotton manufacturers of Carlisle, there is no other business worth mentioning. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good sheep pasturage. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called Dead Water, on account of its stagnant appearance. Mineral springs, which are in considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thorlshope, and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and of many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the thirteenth century, by Gomyne, Earl of Monteth, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during this operation several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring, evidently of very old manufacture, bearing the inscription In Broaderie Amie. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church, and one for the United Presbyterians. Fairs are held in April, May, September, and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The acreage of the parish is 67,858. The population in 1871 was 2,202, the village containing 880.

POST OFFICE, NEW CASTLETON, M. & A. Murray, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at a quarter-past nine morning and twenty-five minutes past seven evening, and are despatched at ten minutes past nine morning, and ten minutes past seven evening.

ST. BOSWELLS,

MAXTON, NEWTOWN, AND MERTON.

ST. BOSWELLS (or LESSUDDEN) is a small village in the parish of its name, 10 miles w. from Kelso, 9 N. from Jedburgh, and 4 E. from Melrose; situated nearly in the centre of the parish, at the east end of a spacious green, and distant about one mile from the St. Boswells station of the North British Railway. The hamlet of St. Boswells consists of one long street, running east and west from the green. Great improvements have of late years taken place, and a plentiful supply of water has been obtained from Whiterig Bog. St. Boswells was at one time noted for one of the largest fairs (on the 18th of July, for black cattle, horses, sheep and wool) held in the country. This fair was also the resort of salesmen of various goods, and it is still much frequented by the direct descendants of the gipsies for the disposal of earthen, horn and tin wares. The parish of St. Boswells is three miles in length, by from one and a half to two in breadth, and is beautifully enclosed, planted and cultivated. On the west rise the Eildon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating, the latter quarter ornamented by the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, enclosed within high banks; beyond the Dryburgh woods rise hills of various altitudes that bound the prospect. Acreage of the parish 3,155. The population in 1871 was 971, and in 1881, 981.

The parish of MAXTON, which is about four miles in length by three in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, well enclosed and planted. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile from the church are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kerrs, of Littledean. At Elliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Auerum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots and English on the 14th of December, 1544, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men, slain and made prisoners. Acreage, 4,422. Population in 1871, 481.

NEWTOWN is a small village in the parish of Melrose, situated about three miles south from that town, and one mile from St. Boswells. The village consists of an United Presbyterian church, a school, two public houses, a few shops and cottages, and the St. Boswells station on the North British line. Population in 1871, 302.

MERTON is a parish in Berwickshire, abutting on Roxburghshire. It is two miles from St. Boswells, and from five to six from Melrose, extending six miles along the banks of the Tweed. Dryburgh Abbey is a superb monastic edifice of cruciform structure, now in ruins, and is much frequented by tourists as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott. At a short distance from the abbey is an Ionic temple, built by the late Earl of Buchan, about the year 1817, in the inside of which is the statue of Apollo, and surmounting the dome is a bust of the author of "The Seasons." His lordship also erected a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace. Acreage, 6,874. Population in 1871, 734.

YETHOLM, LINTON, AND MOREBATTLE.

YETHOLM parish is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trouting stream; the surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of shee p. Situated on the western boundary is YETHOLM or PRIM-IDE LOCH, measuring nearly $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles in circumference. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situated on either side of the Bowmont; that on the side called TOWN-YETHOLM is about eight miles s from Kelso; the other, designated KIRK-YETHOLM, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream. Both are humble in appearance, especially the latter, which is chiefly inhabited by gipsies—a race formerly remarkable for the disorderly lives and dangerous characters, and at this day distinguished by peculiarity of habits from the general body of the community. The close proximity of the border most likely induced the settlement of the gipsies in this locality. The old parish church, which, at the time of its demolition, was the oldest thatched church in Scotland, is now replaced by an elegant edifice of black stone, the windows and corners being faced with white. Besides the Established church there are one each for the members of the United Presbyterian and Free churches. Fairs are held on the 27th of June and the 21st of October for sheep; acreage of the parish, 5,900; population in 1871, 1,100, and in 1881, 796.

LINTON is a strictly agricultural parish, extending nine miles in length by three in breadth; bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Ekeford on the west, and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile. Besides that stream it has two small lochs, one of which abounds with trout, the other with eels. The land, which rises from the Kaile, is under the best system of cultivation. The church is a humble structure, beautifully situated on a high mound. Acreage, 6,393; population in 1871, 570.

The parish of MOREBATTLE is about nine miles in length, with a mean breadth of four. It is bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Ekeford on the west, Hownam on the south, and the county of Northumberland on the east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kaile and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. Near the former stream, at the distance of $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Kelso and 10 from Jedburgh, stands the village. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is Morebottle, which signifies "the dwelling-place at the Marsh." The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitten Castle and Corbet House, indicate this parish to have been the frequent scene of warfare. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and one for United Presbyterians. Acreage of the parish, 22,334; population in 1871, 986, the village numbering 337.

SELKIRKSHIRE.

THIS small county, of irregular form, lies in the south of Scotland, bounded by Roxburghshire on the east and south-east, on the west by the counties of Dumfries and Peebles, and on the south and south-west by Dumfries-shire. The county extends twenty-seven miles from south-west to north-east, and is seventeen and a half miles in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 260 square miles, or 166,524 acres.

EARLY HISTORY.—This border county was formerly designated the “Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest,” from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many of the royal charters it is entitled “The Forest,” and before regular sheriffs were appointed, it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King’s Castle at Selkirk. The ancient history of this county is so intimately associated with that of Roxburghshire (already briefly detailed) that but few incidents worthy of special notice exclusively belong to the district. Unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined “keeps,” the seats of feudal strength; and among other objects worthy the inspection of the antiquary is a large portion of a stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the “Catrail,” once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the fifth century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons.

SURFACE, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many “cleughs” and “hopes,” that run up for some distance between the heights; these vales, as well as the waters (noticed hereafter) which pour through them, have been repeatedly the theme of Scottish as well as English lyrists. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now subjected to the plough, and in these situations wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are—Blackhouse Hills, 2,370 feet; Windlestrae Law, 2,295; Law Kneis, 1,900; the Three Brethren, 1,978; Black Andrew, 1,966; Pentlaw, 1,964; Wardlaw, 1,900; Minchmoor, 1,877; Hangingshaw Law, 1,780; and Peatlaw, 1,557. Throughout the county generally, agriculture is as well understood and practised as in any district of the kingdom. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement of the breed of sheep; this was stimulated, and kept up with great success, by the praiseworthy conduct of the late Lord Napier, who, at the termination of the war, betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming, as an amusement. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. Of minerals, none of the more useful have yet been found in this county, it being equally deficient of coal, lime, and sandstone; in some parts, however, abundance of whinstone is obtained, and a deal of granite. The manufactures of this county, which will be more particularly noticed in the Directory of Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollen, tweeds, tartans, shawls, and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed; the latter valuable river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, during the placid course in a deep channel of nine miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be esteemed a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Clough, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick two miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being St. Mary’s Loch and the Loch of the Lowes, lying at the head of the Yarrow. The principal railway line with which this county is connected is the North British, and the chief town that lies in its route is Galashiels, and a branch from the main line runs to Selkirk.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—The county of Selkirk contains only three complete parishes, namely, Ettrick, Stow, and Yarrow, but has portions of seven other parochial divisions. There is a combination Poorhouse at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose, and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh but not represented in Parliament. The county at large returns one member, the member at present sitting being Charles Tennant, Esq. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-2 was 298. The lord lieutenant is Lord Polwarth. According to the population returns for 1871, Selkirkshire contained 18,572 inhabitants, and in 1881, 23,562. The number of inhabited houses at the latter date was 5,034; uninhabited, 258; building, 101.

GALASHIELS AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GALASHIELS is a burgh of barony and market town, the latter, which is one of manufacturing celebrity, is 31 miles s.s.e. from Edinburgh, 18 e. from Peebles, 6 n. from Selkirk, 4 n.w. from Melrose, and 30 s. by w. from Berwick, partly in the parish of Galashiels and partly in that of Ladhope, charmingly situated on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. It lies on the North British Railway (Waverley route), for which line there is a station in the town; there is also a line to Selkirk, and to Edinburgh, Innerleithen, and Peebles. The parish of Galashiels was formed out of the two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, in the early part of the seventeenth century. Galashiels is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than fifty years. It is composed of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of handsome villas in the immediate neighbourhood, these being the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the church, the manse, and a few of the original respectable dwellings; and this portion has also been much improved by new erections. It is situated on a sort of table-land overlooking the picturesque vale of the Gala, and is allowed to be the most pleasing as well as the most healthy part of the town. The river is here crossed by three bridges, two of stone and one of wood. The wire suspension bridge, erected in 1816, was swept away by a great flood some years ago. The town or Public Hall, erected by a joint-stock company is a handsome building, situated in High street, two storeys high, the upper storey being used for public meetings, concerts, &c. A drill-shed, erected for the 1st Selkirkshire Volunteers, is well adapted for concerts, public meetings, &c. For many years Galashiels has enjoyed an envied distinction in the manufacture of tweeds. This is the staple of the place, and there are many houses engaged in it. This town, in common with others in the south, interested in manufactures, sustained for a long period great inconvenience from its distance from seaports, railways, and collieries; but the extension of the North British Railway to these parts has to a great extent obviated the obstructions that commerce had previously laboured under. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the Friday nearest the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trades, and conferring on matters therewith connected. The business and commerce of the town and district are facilitated by branches of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank, Limited, and the British Linen Co.'s Bank. Other trades flourishing in Galashiels are the coal, corn, timber and leather tanning. A small debt court is held in the town six times a year. Two newspapers are published, the Border Advertiser and the Scottish Border Record, which have a large circulation in the border counties. The places of worship in Galashiels comprise churches of the Establishment, and of the Free Communion of Scotland, and edifices for the worship of Unitarians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Episcopalians, and Congregationalists. A short distance from the town is situated ABNOTSFORD, the beautiful seat of the late Sir Walter Scott. A bulk grain market is held on Tuesday, a fair on the third Wednesday of March, and a live stock sale every alternate Saturday. The parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 8,480. According to the returns for 1871, the town contained 10,812 inhabitants, and in 1881, 15,843.

SELKIRK,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ASHKIRK, ETTRICK, ROBERTON, KIRKHOPE, YARROW, AND CADDONFOOT.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish; 38 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, 22 E. by S. from Peebles, 12 N.W. from Hawick, 8 S.W. from Melrose, and 6 S. from Galashiels, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the king. In the oldest charter it is called Seleschirke, Sele chyre or Sel chire, which signify the great or the good church. When a second kirk was erected in the vicinity, after the foundation of a monastery by David I. in 1113, the prior place received the dignified title of Selkirk Regie, while the village of the monks was denominated Selkirk Abbas. The monks of Selkirk did not, however, remain long settled in the town; they were removed to a more pleasant locality by their royal patron. Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its site cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Formerly Selkirk exhibited but an indifferent appearance in its buildings and their arrangement, but a spirit of improvement has been developed which has imparted to the place an aspect far more prepossessing. Many hand some private houses have been built in the vicinity of the town. The Market place is embellished with a very beautiful monument to Sir Walter Scott. In High street there is a monument in remembrance of Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshields, in this county; it is the work of Andrew Currie, a native artist. In 1865 extensive alterations and improvements were made to the gaol, at a cost of about £2,000. In 1870 new buildings were completed for the business of the county, including sheriff's court room, and offices for sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal, and other officials. The old Town Hall in the market place is used for burgh courts, meetings of town council, police commissioners, and other public bodies. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogue, (a description of single-soled shoes); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish six thousand pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied, and soon after a few hundreds more. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—twines, tartans, plaids and shawls, and wool spinning and tanning. A railway is open from here to Galashiels, where it joins the Waverley line of the North British system, thus giving to Selkirk railway communication with most parts of Great Britain. The town possesses three principal inns, namely, Hogg's Station Hotel, which has recently been rebuilt, the County and the Fleece. Branches of the British Linen Company's Bank and the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, are settled here, and there is a Savings Bank. The introduction of manufactures has caused a great augmentation of the population of the town, and a material extension of its ancient limits. As a royal burgh Selkirk is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and eleven councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff's court is held on Wednesdays and Fridays. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday of March, May, and August, and last Tuesday of October, and special justice of peace courts as found necessary. The places of public worship are two churches of the Establishment, a Free church, two for United Presbyterians, an Independent, an Episcopalian, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The institutions for education in Selkirk comprise, besides three Board schools, a burgh school, Roman Catholic school, and some private academies. The inhabitants support a public library and a Mechanics' Institute.

The rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half above Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed. About two miles below the town the beautiful mansion of Bowhill (belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch), the stately ruins of Newark Castle, the fertile straths, and the serpentine windings of the two rivers, together with many elegant seats, form beautiful scenery, romantic and diversified. Philiphaugh the residence of Sir John Murray, is a beautiful castellated mansion; amongst others may be noted Sunderland Hall and Broadmeadows. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April, and 31st October. Acreage of the parish, 22,558; population in 1871, 5,638, and in 1881, 7,833, and of the town, 6,090.

ETTRICK is a parish situated in the south-west part of Selkirkshire, bordering on Dumfriesshire; this parish is very mountainous. Thirlstane Castle, the residence of Lord Napier, is situated in Ettrick. There is an Established church and a parochial school. Acreage, 42,887; population in 1871, 434.

KIRKHOPE parish is a presbytery of Selkirk. It formerly formed part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjointed in 1851. The parish is very hilly, there being eight hills in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. A church of the Establishment and two small endowed schools are situated at ETTRICK BRIDGE END, a small village in Kirkhope. Acreage, 22,724; population in 1871, 565.

YARROW is a parish in the presbytery of Selkirk, lying south-west from that town. The parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by Hogg, the "Ettrick Shepherd," to whose memory there is a monument at St. Mary's Loch. This loch is a great resort for visitors in summer. There are an Established and a Free church here, also a Board school. Acreage about 42,000; population in 1871, 662.

CADDONFOOT is a quoad sacra parish in the north-eastern division of the county, erected in 1870. It has a church and school in connection with the Establishment.

ROBERTON is a parish situated in the south-east part of Selkirk, bordering on Roxburghshire. Population in 1871, 693.

STIRLINGSHIRE,

ONE of the most important and beautiful counties in Scotland, is situated partly in the Highlands and partly in the Lowlands; bounded on the east by the county of Linlithgow and the river Forth, on the south and west by Dumbartonshire, on the north by the shires of Perth and Clackmannan (which latter county touches it also on the east), and on the south and east by portions of Lanarkshire. Its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water on the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely singular, and has been fancifully likened both to a fish and a serpent; its tail, which diminishes to an apex at the north, is inserted between the counties of Dumbarton and Perth; and its head is suddenly turned towards the shire of Lanark (on the south), and Linlithgow on the south-east. Its length from east to west is thirty-six miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of forty-five miles; its breadth varies from twelve to twenty miles, except where it declines towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of four hundred and sixty-seven square miles, or 298,579 acres.

EAST HISTORY.—This county, from its situation between the Firths of Forth and Clyde, and on the direct passage from the northern to the southern parts of the island, has been the scene of many memorable transactions; and there are few counties where monuments of antiquity are so frequently to be met with; neither does it yield to any in point of modern improvements or in the beauties of scenery. The wall of Antonine, built for the purpose of protecting the Roman conquests on the south, traversed the lower division of the county, and has left some slight traces for the investigation of the antiquary; the remains of Roman forts are also distinguishable, and weapons and coins of that invading power have been occasionally dug from the soil. After the overthrow of the Pictish sovereignty, Stirlingshire with all the country on the south side of the Forth was for some years under the dominion of the Northumbrian Saxons; and at a later period it passed quietly under the government of the Scottish sovereigns. Subsequently, considerable importance was attached to the county from the position and strength of the castle of Stirling (which will be found noticed more particularly under the head of its locality), commanding as it did, the most important pass betwixt the northern and southern districts of the kingdom. In the twelfth century it was much benefited by David I. who erected religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, within its bounds; and the inmates of these establishments being generally learned men, their pious authority tended to civilise the rude manners of the inhabitants.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MINERALS, MANUFACTURES, &c.—This county, as has been said, is partly Highland and partly Lowland. The former, which is the western quarter and adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here the majestic Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than three thousand feet. East from this Highland part the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth of the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from thirteen to fifteen hundred feet; from one of these eminences, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained one of the finest views in Scotland; it is computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine grass sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of beautiful carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich valley of the Forth. In this quarter the country has experienced improvements of the most extensive and beneficial character; and it now exhibits the pleasing spectacle of fertile meadows, fields in the highest stage of tillage, with plantations, pleasure grounds, gardens, and orchards, all in the most exuberant vegetation and fruitfulness. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile in the county is the alluvial or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam present their surface to the husbandman in other parts of the county. From the great variety of the soil, the system of agriculture in Stirlingshire naturally cannot be uniform, nor its produce equally abundant or limited to any particular species; large crops of wheat, barley, beans, peas, turnips, potatoes, &c., are raised; the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of numerous flocks of sheep, which are of the old black-faced or Highland breed; there are but few cattle reared, the county being sufficiently supplied by the drovers from the Highlands. Stirlingshire is inferior to few districts of Scotland in the quantity and variety of its mineral productions, the most abundant of which are coal, ironstone, limestone and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district, in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde Canal; the county produces such quantities of this mineral as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but by means of the Union Canal to supply the metropolis. Ironstone, limestone, and sandstone are found in the same districts with the coal. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought about a century ago, but the working of them was soon discontinued; copper, lead, and cobalt have likewise been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief sent of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians) to a valuable extent; at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn (ever memorable for the decisive defeat of the army of Edward by the triumphant Bruce) carpets are manufactured; while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries and chemical establishments.

RIVERS, MOUNTAINS AND RAILWAYS.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire; it takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into that noble estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only seven miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than twenty by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron; it has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burthen for about two miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, the Kelvin, none of which, however, require particular notice. Besides these waters, the county enjoys the advantage of the Forth and Clyde Canal and the Union Navigation, which is of paramount importance to the commerce of this productive and flourishing district. The eminences of greatest altitude above the level of the sea are—Ben Lomond (before mentioned), 3,262; Alda Hill, 1,600; and Campsie Fells, 1,500 feet. The county is intersected by the Caledonian Railway, and by the Forth and Clyde and the Edinburgh and Glasgow sections of the North British line, with several branches from each, thus affording facilities of communication with all parts of the kingdom.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Stirlingshire comprises twenty-two complete parishes, and portions of four others. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is a royal burgh), and Falkirk; the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline, and Inverkeithing in returning a member to the legislature; and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county sends a third representative; the present member is J. C. Bolton, Esq. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-2 was 3,480. The lord lieutenant is the Earl of Dunmore. According to the Government returns for 1871 the population amounted to 98,218, comprising 48,215 males and 50,003 females; in 1881 there were 56,100 males and 56,337 females; total 112,437, an increase over the previous return of 14,219. The inhabited houses at the latter date numbered 21,984; uninhabited, 1,891; building, 200

AIRTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

AIRTH is an ancient village in the parish of its name, the latter about six miles in length by about two in breadth, 27 miles w. from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 E. from Stirling, and 6 N.W. from Falkirk, situate on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennet Pans. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. It possesses an Established church, a Free church, United Presbyterian chapel, and an Episcopal church at Dunmore. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages, &c. to Alloa, and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success; and the coal mines, of which there are several in the neighbourhood, afford employment to many of the labouring classes. Airth Castle, occupied by

Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, is an elegant mansion, in the pure Gothic style, and few buildings are superior to it either in chaste simplicity of architecture or elegance of design. In the parish are three ancient towers, one at Airth, another at Dunmore, a third at Powfoulis; that at Airth is of very early date, and is called Wallace's Tower, from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. Some years ago an anchor was found in Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of Airth parish, 5,477 population in 1871, 1,395, and in 1881, 1,434, of which the village contained 561.

BALFRON

IS a manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 19 miles north from Glasgow (its post town), the like distance north-west from Stirling, and 16 north-east from Dumbarton, agreeably situated on the declivity of a hill. The parish is about 11 miles in length, and 3 in breadth; bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnoch and Fuirry, on the south and south-west by Kilsarn and Drymen, and on the north by Kippen. The cotton spinning works of Messrs. H. W. Pollock & Co are situated in this village, and employ a number of the inhabitants, chiefly females. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is in the village. On the site of the old parish school there has been erected a handsome and commodious public school, with a dwelling-house for the schoolmaster. The school is capable of accommodating about 250 children, and is under the charge of Mr. Robert Sewell, one of the few remaining schoolmasters appointed by the heritors prior to the passing of the Education Act. The annual fair is held on the third Tuesday in May (old style). Acreage of the parish, 7,820. Population in 1871, 1,503; of the village, 1,085.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF LECROFT AND LOGIE, AND THE VILLAGES OF CAUSEWAYHEAD MENSTRIE AND BLAIR LOGIE.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN, a beautifully romantic and fashionable watering place, is situate on the river Allan, about one mile and a half from its confluence with the Forth, three miles from Stirling, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochil hills. A small portion of it is in the parish of Lecroft, and the remainder in that of Logie; and it is also situated in two counties—Stirling and Perth.
 It is a post town and a station on the Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian line. It is resorted to by persons from all parts of the world, as well for pleasure as for restoration of health, on account of the mildness of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters. Prior to the discovery of these springs, the place was comparatively little known and presented to the tourist the unassuming aspect of a small and quiet country hamlet, with a few whitewashed and thatched cottages embosomed in venerable trees, together with an old mill and an ancient public house offering "entertainment for man and beast." Since that period things have greatly changed, and Bridge of Allan is now a large and handsome village, consisting of well-built houses and tasteful villas. There are also several hotels, which for elegance and comfort are not surpassed in Scotland.
 In 1871 Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act. Its municipal affairs are managed by nine commissioners, who, from their own number, elect a senior and two junior magistrates. The higher part of the village in the neighbourhood of the Wells and Coneyhill is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many handsome villas are erected, the sloping sides of the hill being tastefully adorned with trees, commanding a most beautiful and varied series of views, including Stirling, its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, with other objects of interest. Numerous improvements were made for the accommodation and recreation of the public by the late Major J. Alexander Henderson, of Westerton, on whose estate a considerable portion of the village is erected. There are churches of the establishment, a quoad omnia parish church, a Free church, one for United Presbyterians, and a Scotch Episcopal chapel. Among the various attractions and objects of amusement are a billiard room, bagatelle room, reading rooms and a library, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures, two bowling greens, Keir Gardens, the seat of the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell, which are open once a week to the public, and several miles of good angling.

 The late great patron of the place also revived the ancient and interesting game of tilting at the ring, a sport much practised in the reign of James I., and which is still one of the chief among the many attractions of the now famous "Strathallan Meeting," annually held on the first Saturday of August, in Westerton Park, the seat of the lord of the manor, General Sir James Edward Alexander, Knt. The above meeting for Scottish athletic games takes pre-eminence of all others in Scotland. In the same park some of the prize meetings of the Ochil Archery Club are held

It is, however, chiefly to its mineral wells that Bridge of Allan owes its principal claims to attention. These are situated on the Airthrey estate, the property of Lord Abercromby, and within a few minutes' walk of the village. They are highly celebrated for their medicinal virtues, externally and internally, and have proved of great benefit to numerous invalids. There are convenient baths, and the hotels before noticed are admirably suited for the reception of families and other visitors; while the walks around are beneficial auxiliaries in improving the health of the invalids. Among the business establishments, besides the inns, are large bleaching and dye works, and a paper manufactory. The Bridge of Allan connects the parishes of LEACROFT and LOGIE, at the confluence of the Teith and Allan, and is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Acreage of the parish of Leacroft 2,968, population in 1871, 635; Bridge of Allan at the same period numbered 3,055 inhabitants. In 1881 the population of Bridge of Allan was 2,462.

LOGIE, or Blair Logie, is a parish situated on the Forth at a part where the counties of Perth, Stirling and Clackmannan meet, a portion of the parish being situated in each of the three counties, the larger portion being on the north bank of the river Forth, opposite Stirling. Within the parish, on a flat peninsula formed by a sinuosity of the river, is the tall and desolate ruin of Canbus-kenneth Abbey, founded by David I. in 1147, and once a place of great magnitude. Within the precincts of the abbey James III. and his Queen were interred. During some excavations made a few years ago among the ruins the royal remains were discovered and re-interred. A beautiful tombstone now marks the spot, being erected at the expense of Her Majesty. The plain adjacent to the abbey was the arena on which Wallace obtained his first open and signal victory over the arms of King Edward. The village of Blair Logie is most agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, at the entrance to SHERIFF MUIR and the mouth of Glendevon, and presents a singularly pleasing scene of natural beauty, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. The kirk, which is small and neat, stands about three miles from Stirling and the same distance from Bridge of Allan. Acreage of the parish 11,814; population in 1871, 4,555.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling, situated in the counties of Stirling and Clackmannan, and at the foot of Abbey Craig—a detached portion of the Ochil range—which presents a precipitous front of about 560 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge and almost perpendicularly over the village stands Wallace's monument. It is in the form of a Scotch baronial tower, surmounted by a crown, and is 220 feet in height. The foundation was laid June, 24th, 1861 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn), with masonic honours, by the Duke of Athole. From the summit, which is reached by a spiral stair, the view is rich in natural beauty and historic associations. Population in 1871, 836.

MENSTRIE is a village partly in the parish of Logie, in the southern part of Perthshire, and partly in that of Alloa, Clackmannanshire. It is situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, five miles from the former, five miles from Bridge of Allan, and two from Alva. The manufacture of different kinds of woollen fabrics gives employment to many of the inhabitants. A quaint old house in the village is pointed out as having been the birthplace of Sir William Alexander, who figured as statesman and poet during the reign of James VI. when he held his court at Stirling. Having become an especial favourite with that monarch, he conferred on him the order of knighthood, besides various offices of high trust. He was afterwards created Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles I. at Holyrood, in consideration of his services, and of having been the founder of the colony of Nova Scotia. The estates at a subsequent period passed into the possession of the Abercrombie family; and it was in the same house that in the year 1734 was born the celebrated general Sir Ralph Abercrombie. There is a large distillery here. Public Board schools were erected in 1875, at a cost of about £4,000. Population in 1871, 658.

DENNY AND DUNIPACE,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BONNYBRIDGE, DENNY LOANHEAD, AND HAGGS.

DENNY is a thriving and increasing post town in the parish of its name, 29 miles w. from Edinburgh, 20 N.E. from Glasgow, 7 s. from Stirling, and 5 w. from Falkirk. The extent of the parish is about six miles long by an average of four in breadth, bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, and on the west and north by the Carron. The contiguous parishes are St. Ninians and Dunipace. It is on the road directly south from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through the town. Near this parish is the Forth and Clyde Canal, which is of great benefit to the agriculturists, as well as the manufacturers, of the district. Places of interest to the tourist in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron glen, and the ruins of Torwood Castle. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history, but are now that of active industry, and a source of wealth to the surrounding country. The uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the stream, have caused the establishment of very considerable works on its margin, comprising paper and dye-wood mills and chemical works, and in the vicinity is a distillery and coal and iron mines, the whole furnishing employment to a large and industrious population. The Denny Railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly four miles distant. The terminus is close to the town, from which run two sub-branches, extending to the iron mines in the neighbourhood, by which the mineral is conveyed to works near Coatbridge. There is a handsome hall where the Oddfellows' lodge and public meetings are held. There is a lodge of the Ancient Order of Foresters, the Free Gardeners, and Freemasons, and a People's Club and Reading Room. Paper making is carried on to a great extent at three large works. The places of worship are the parish church, Free church, a United Presbyterian chapel, and one for Roman Catholics. Large public Board schools were erected in 1875 at a cost of about £5,000. Two fairs are held here annually, one on the Wednesday before the 12th May, the other on the Wednesday after the 11th November. Acreage of the parish, 8,309; population in 1871, 4,993, and in 1881, 5,728; the town numbering 4,223.

DUNIPACE is a parish divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Melkie Denovan, Dunipace, and Torwood, bounded on the north and west by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert, and on the south by Falkirk and Denny. This locality is rendered famous, in the works of most Scottish topographers, from possessing two mounds, called "The Hills of Dunipace," the origin of which or the purposes to which they were devoted have exercised the ingenuity and stimulated the researches of the antiquarian. The traditionary account is that they were erected as monuments of a peace concluded upon their site between the Romans and the Caledonians; but there are strong reasons for presuming that they are sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. This parish is rich in minerals, and has an extended line of the Denny branch of railway crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny, extending to the mines, which give employment, with the other works, to the inhabitants of this district. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches. Acreage of the parish, 5,585; population in 1871, 1,738, and in 1881, 1,875.

BONNYBRIDGE is an enterprising village, about two miles and a half south-east of Denny. It is partly situated in the latter parish but mostly in the parish of Falkirk, from which place it is about four miles distant. The ground around here is arable, and presents a most pleasing aspect. The Forth and Clyde Canal passes the village, and upon its banks are the extensive works of Messrs. Smith and Welwood, Messrs. George Ure and Co. and Messrs. C. and J. Oswald. In connection with the two former works is a commodious literary hall, containing a library, with upwards of 400 volumes, daily newspapers and periodicals are also furnished, the whole being supplied by these firms for the instruction and edification of the men employed at their works, who number upwards of 550. Population in 1871, 731.

DENNY LOANHEAD is a straggling village, situated about two miles south of Denny, in the same parish. A chapel for United Presbyterians is in the village, and a public school. Minerals abound in the neighbourhood, and there is also a large forge for the manufacture of spades and shovels. The Forth and Clyde Canal and the Caledonian Railway pass about a mile to the south.

HAGGS is situated about one and a half miles west of Denny Loanhead, and in the parish of Denny. It contains an Established church and a handsome public Board school, erected in 1875, at a cost of about £4,000. A distillery is at the extreme west end of the parish, at BANKIER. The battle of Kilsyth was fought 15th August, 1645, in the neighbourhood of Hollandbush, near Haggs. Population in 1831, 1,500.

DRYMEN,

BUCHANAN, GARTNESS, AND THE DISTRICT OF CROFTAMIE.

DRYMEN, a parish and village, 17 miles from Glasgow, 15 miles long by 10 in breadth, bounded on the north by Aberfoyle, on the east by Kippen, Balloch and Killarn, on the south by Killarn, Kilmarnock and Dumbarton on the west by Buchanan and Kilmarnock, lies on the south-eastern shore of Loch Lomond, into which, below the village, runs the river Endrick. The village contains the parish church, and a chapel for United Presbyterians. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in a handsome building well adapted for the purpose. Fairs for cattle are held on the last Wednesday in April (old style) and 17th May (new style). Acreage of the parish, 30,850; population in 1871, 1,405.

BUCHANAN is a parish lying on the western extremity of the county, mountainous and moorish; it is bounded by the parish of Arrochar on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Aberfoyle, Loch Katrine and Drymen on the east, and is about 24 miles in length and five in breadth. The river of Forth rises in the district at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. The seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose, Buchanan Castle, stands on the margin of Loch Lomond, and the Fort of Inversaid near the head of the loch. Acreage of the parish, 41,598; population in 1871, 591.

At GARTNESS, about 2½ miles from Drymen, is a fall of water of about 12 feet tumbling over a rock, which the salmon going up the river clear by a leap. Near the village are two manufactories for woollen cloths and felting. It was here that Lord Napier of Merchiston (inventor of the logarithms) resided when he was making his calculations.

CROFTAMIE is a district containing a few houses, in the parish of Kilmarnock (Dumbartonshire), situated about 1½ miles from Drymen village; the Forth and Clyde section of the North British Railway runs through it, and the Drymen station is situated here.

POST OFFICE, DRYMEN STATION, Thomas Smith, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Glasgow) at thirty minutes past seven and forty-two minutes past eleven morning, and are despatched at thirty minutes past eleven morning and thirty minutes past three afternoon.

Post Office, DRYMEN VILLAGE, Elizabeth N. FALKIRK,

BOTHKENNAR, CAMELON, CARNOCK, CARRON, CARRON SHORE, LAURIESTON, POLMONT, REDDING AND SLAMANNAN.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, and the principal town of the eastern district of the county, as it is of the parish to which it gives name. The extreme length of the parish is nine miles, its breadth five and a quarter miles. It is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamannan, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire. The town is 24 miles west from Edinburgh, 22 s.e. from Glasgow, 11 s.e. from Stirling, and three from Grangemouth. It is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Carse or Kerse of Falkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect, which, for beauty of landscape, is scarcely surpassed in any part of Scotland. The views comprise (besides the rich and fertile "carse," which is well cultivated and interspersed with villages and several gentlemen's seats), the river Forth, with vessels passing to and from the ports of Grangemouth, Alloa, Kincardine, &c., and also up and down the great canal, which intersects the county about half a mile north of the town, while to the south it is bounded by Callendar wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town. Few situations more eligible for rendering a place handsome could have been selected. As it is, the town has a very good appearance. It consists of (excluding a number of back streets and lanes, or wynds) one principal street, which is long and irregular. In general, the houses are built of heavy stone, and the town is ornamented with a steep 145 feet high, in which are two bells and a clock, and immediately to the west of which an equestrian statue of the late Duke of Wellington was erected in 1854 by public subscription. It is of stone, and is a great ornament to the High street. In the year 1859 a commodious Exchange or Corn Market was built on the north side of the parish church, in which a stock market is held every Thursday. The dues or customs from the market amount to about £170 per annum. The port of Grangemouth, situate about three miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a railway, formed by the Forth and Clyde Canal Company. A number of small villas are situated towards the north of the town; they form a street, about half a mile in length, uniting to the town GRAHAMSTON and BAINSFORD, and thereby forming a continuous double line of upwards of a mile in extent. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, and eight councillors. This body first came into existence in 1838, but for want of any power of raising money to carry on a municipal government, the powers of the magistrates were latent. This defect was remedied by an act passed called the "Falkirk Police and Improvement Act," under which the magistrates assist the inhabitants for police and improvement purposes. The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, is situated in Hope street; the building includes court rooms for the sheriff and justices, procurator's hall, &c. At the same time a new prison and county police office were erected. New Borough Buildings were erected in Newmarket street in 1878. The inhabitants of Falkirk have been long celebrated for a manly spirit of independence, both political and religious, combined with a liberality of sentiment and a sociability of intercourse seldom witnessed elsewhere. Falkirk, as it is situate in a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, commands an extensive inland trade, no market being held in the seven or eight surrounding parishes; and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between fifty and sixty thousand people. Under the head of manufactures, we may mention, in addition to the leather trade in tanning and currying, the making of fire bricks and tiles, with a distillery and several chemical works. Besides the famous Carron Works, which are the oldest and most extensive in Scotland, there are the Abbots Iron Works, the Falkirk Iron Works, the Gowan Bank Iron Works, the Grahamston Iron Company's Works, the Burnbank Iron Works, the Etna Iron Works, the Parkhouse Iron Works, the Camelon Iron Works, the Callendar Iron Works, the Springfield Iron Works, and about a mile to the west are the Port Downie Iron Works, the Forth and Clyde Iron Works and the Gas Iron Works. There are various coal works in the vicinity, and extensive timber yards and flour mills. The Union Canal joins the Forth and Clyde Canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length. Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I., afterwards a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I., but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters," chosen by the different trades of the town, formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by act of Parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held as occasion requires. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slamannan, Larbert, Bothkennar, and Airth. A fine block of stone buildings was erected in 1876, at the north side of the High street, styled the Glebe Buildings. There are five branch banks and a savings bank in the town. The old church, founded by King Malcolm Canmore in 1057, was some years since taken down, and a new one, of the Gothic order, erected on its site; a tower connected with the ancient structure was, however, permitted to retain its position. In the churchyard lie the bodies of Sir John de Graham (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298, whilst fighting for the independence of their country against Edward I.; two plain stones mark the spots of their interment. In the same cemetery stands the monument to two brave officers, Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, January 17th, 1746. Various sects have places of worship in Falkirk and neighbourhood; the situation of each, with their respective officiating ministers, are given in a subsequent page. All the burial grounds being closed by order of the sheriff, a new cemetery has been provided for the entire parish; it embraces an area of eleven acres, and is situate about a mile west of Falkirk. There are three public schools, and a large academy and boarding establishment. A market for grain is held on Thursday. Seven fairs are annually held for cattle and horses, namely, the last Thursday in January, the first Thursday in March, the third Thursday in May, the second Thursday in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the first Thursday in November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October), called feiring Thursdays, which are numerously attended. The three Falkirk trysts, supposed to be the largest cattle markets in the kingdom, are held in the neighbourhood on the second Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in August, September and October. The population of Falkirk, including Grahamston and Bainsford, was in 1871, 11,712, and in 1881, 13,175.

CARNOCK is a small district in the parish of St. Ninian, but in the postal delivery of Falkirk.

CAMELON is a village in the parish of Falkirk, situate on the road from Stirling to Falkirk, about a mile west from the latter town, on the line of the great canal; it consists chiefly of one tolerably well-built street. There are two nail manufactories of some importance, as well as the three foundries before mentioned, and likewise a boat building yard, while about half a mile further west is an extensive paraffin oil and tar distillery. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquarian, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian, and when subsequently possessed by the Picts had twelve brazen gates. No vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The present village had its origin about fifteen years back, and the sea is now about four miles distant from it.

CARRON is a village in the parish of Larbert, one and a half miles east therefrom; it is situated on the river Carron, and about two and a half miles from Falkirk. The immense iron works of the Carron Company occupy almost the whole village. Population in 1871, 1,063.

CARRON SHORE is a village at the extreme north-east of Larbert, about two miles therefrom, situated partly in that parish, and partly in that of Bothkennar, and about three miles from Falkirk. The river Carron passes the village, which contains a mission church belonging to the Establishment, a Free Church school and other schools. The Carron Company have numerous collieries here for supplying their works. Railways run in various directions from the works to these collieries. Population in 1871, 966.

LAURIESTON (or Laurieston) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about one mile east from that town. Nail making, which was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, is now almost extinct. This place was originally called Langtown, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Laurieston, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it. Population in 1871, 1,310.

The parish of BOTHKENNAR, about two miles long by an equal breadth, lies in the carse of Falkirk, and about three miles therefrom; it is a rich and fertile district, possessing some excellent orchards, and contains the parish church and school. It is bounded on the north by the parish of Airth, on the west by the parish of Larbert, on the south by the parishes of Falkirk and Polmont, and on the east by the river Forth. Coal abounds in the parish, which is got to supply the Carron Company. On the Avon at the ruins of an old nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV. and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient castle of Almond, for several generations the favourite seat of the Earls of Callendar. Acreage of the parish, 1,774. Population in 1871, 2,455.

The parish of POLMONT is one of the richest and most beautiful districts in the county, with little exception, being arable land, finely enclosed and planted; it has the river Avon on its eastern boundary, and is intersected by the main road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and by the Union Canal and the Frith of Forth on the north. The parish, which extends five miles inland from the Forth, is about two miles in breadth, and has within its limits several coal works, and abounds in iron and freestone. There is a large private school here, called Blair Lodge, conducted on public principles, with accommodation for over 100 boarders. The school stands in its own grounds of 30 acres. The village of Polmont lies on the road to Falkirk, and from whence it is three miles and a half to the east. The small village of NETHER POLMONT is situate on the coast from Falkirk to Bo'ness, from which it is four miles distant. Acreage of the parish, 5,512; population in 1871, 3,910; of the village, 465.

REDDING is a district situate in the parish of Polmont, abounding in coal mines, all of which are worked by the Redding Coal Company; there is a public school and a chapel for Methodists. Population in 1871, 599.

SLAMANNAN parish lies on the south bank of the Avon, about seven miles from Falkirk, extending along the margin of that river, for about five miles, and from three to four in breadth. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which is a tributary to the great reservoir for the Clyde Canal. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the three shires of Stirling, Dumbarton, and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet with the shire of Linlithgow. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. Acreage of the parish, 7,062; population in 1871, 4,164; of the village, 681.

FINTRY,

A VILLAGE in the parish of its name, is 41 miles from Edinburgh at the distance of at least eight miles. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which is the celebrated Leap of Fintury, a cataract of the Endrick descending ninety one feet; and on the Carron is another, about 112 feet, called the "Auchinilly Linn Spout." Near the village of Fintury is a hill called the "Dun," on which is a range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some fifty feet in length; among them may be observed a vertical without any joints; altogether they form an attractive object, and are much visited by tourists. Acreage of the parish 19,772. Population in 1871, 499.

GRANGEMOUTH

IS a busy and thriving seaport in the parish of Falkirk, 3 miles from that town, 27 from Edinburgh, and 25 from Glasgow. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal. The formation of this place was commenced in 1777 by the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the accommodation of the shipping passing through the Canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port. It is now a place of importance, and displays the enterprise of the British merchant in an eminent degree by its numerous and commodious quays, granaries, and warehouses for goods, and its spacious wet docks and basins for timber. It has also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock, and timber yard. Rope and sail making is extensively carried on, and there are saw mills and large collieries adjacent. The Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, and Bank of Scotland have branches here. There are two good school-houses—one erected by the Earl of Zetland, to which a library is attached, the other a public Board school, erected in 1876, at a cost of about £3,000. The wet dock, opened in 1843, affording room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping, being found too small for the trade, additional dock accommodation was added. The growth of the port is no doubt attributable to the very moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage to enter the docks. The canal rates of toll are also low, and an abundant supply of lighters is always in the port. The area of basins for timber exceeds 17 acres. New docks were opened on the 3rd of June, 1882. The ground acquired for their construction amounted to nearly sixty acres, and nineteen and a half acres of this is the water area of the new docks and timber basins, the actual dockage area being about ten and a half acres. On the same date a new park, which covers eight and a half acres, kindly granted by the Earl of Zetland, was thrown open to the inhabitants. A branch railway, which joins the North British at Falkirk, was formed in 1859, thus putting the port in connection with the railway system of the country. The Caledonian Railway Company have also a branch line, which joins the Scottish central section at Larbert. There are large imports of timber, grain, flax, &c., from Norway, Denmark, America, Prussia, and the Baltic in general, besides a considerable coasting trade. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Copenhagen, Middlesbro', &c. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with unrivalled advantages for the above imports of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the west of Scotland. Near the canal stands Kerse House, the seat of the Earl of Zetland. There is an Established church, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. The population of Grangemouth in 1871, was 2,569, and in 1881, 4,424.

KILLEARN.

KILLEARN is a village in the parish of its name, 50 miles w. from Edinburgh, 20 s.s.w. from Stirling, and nearly 17 n.w. from Glasgow, situate on the river Endrick, almost in the centre of the district, and in a pleasant part of the country. The parish is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½ miles, the river, with the parish of Balfour, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane, and on the west by Drymen. Gentlemen's seats and pleasure grounds abound throughout the parish; and these, with the surrounding highly picturesque scenery, render the aspect of the locality most agreeable. Considerable interest is also attached to this part of the county as having been the birth place or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat. It has an additional claim to the attention of the literary world from being indisputably the birthplace of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, whose name is deservedly famous all over Europe. He was born at a place called the Mess, a small farmhouse on the banks of the Water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn the farm was the property of the distinguished author's father, and was for a long period possessed by persons of the name of Buchanan. A beautiful monument of white freestone was erected in the village, by the gentlemen of the parish and neighbourhood, in honour of the memory of their eminently gifted countryman. It is a well-proportioned obelisk, 19 feet square at the base, and 108 feet in height above the ground. The expense of its erection was defrayed by voluntary subscription. Near the obelisk, the parochial church, a neat modern structure, has superseded the old place of worship, the ruins of which still remain. The land of the parish is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Acreage of the parish, 15,370; population in 1871, 1,111, of the village, 337.

POST OFFICE, KILLEARN, James Thompson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at seven and half-past eight morning, and twenty minutes before twelve morning, and are despatched at ten minutes before ten morning and five minutes past five evening.

KILSYTH,

AND THE VILLAGE OF BANTON.

KILSYTH is a considerable town and burgh in the parish of its name, 35 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 15 s. from Stirling, between 12 and 18 n. from Glasgow, nearly 12 w. by s. from Falkirk, and 4 from Cumbernauld; situated on the main road leading to the three first-named places. It is a straggling and irregularly built place; a considerable proportion of the inhabitants are employed in weaving for Glasgow houses and resident manufacturers. The parish is abundantly stocked with coal and iron stone, vast quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron Iron Works, near Falkirk, and to Gartsherrie and Langloan, near Coatbridge. The district is about seven miles in length, and three and a half in breadth. In form the parish is an irregular oblong, bounded by St. Ninians and Entry on the north, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers; it also contains one of the reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde Canal. In 1637 near the village of Kilsyth, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingston, attained in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial place of this family the bodies of the last Lady Kilsyth and her infant son lay embalmed for many years. About the middle of the parish is a hill which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. Railway communication with Glasgow was opened here in 1878, through the Blane Valley section of the North British Line. Besides the parish church there are places of worship for members of the Free church, the United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, are established in the village, also a Savings Bank. Fairs are held on the first Friday in April, and the third Friday in November. Acreage of the parish, 13,121; population in 1871, 6,812, and in 1881, 6,886, the town numbering 5,800.

BANTON and HIGH BANTON are small villages, situate about two and a half miles north-east of Kilsyth, in that parish, and about six miles south-west from Denny; a parish church is at Banton, and also a public school.

POST OFFICE, KILSYTH, Archibald Chalmers, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at ten minutes past eight morning and half-past two afternoon, and are despatched at twenty minutes past six morning and half-past five evening.

KIPPEN,

WITH THE PARISH OF GARGUNNOCK, AND THE VILLAGE OF BUCHLYVIE.

KIPPEN is a village ten miles west from Stirling, situate in the eastern part of the parish of its name. The parish is eight miles in length by from two to four in breadth, and is bounded on the north by the river Forth, on the east by Gargunnoch, on the south by Balfour, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it lies partly in the county of Stirling and partly in that of Perth; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented. Kippen village possesses two churches—an elegant one belonging to the Establishment, and a Free church. Near the railway station is the historically celebrated Ford of Frew, where in 1746 Prince Charles lost his cannon, while retreating before the Campbells. Mineral wells are situated in the neighbourhood. A quarry of red stone is also near the village. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December, and at Balfour, a moor about two miles from Kippen, for horses, cattle and sheep on the Friday before the 26th June. Acreage of the parish, 11,266; population in 1871, 1,568, and in 1881, 1,500; and of the village, 320.

BUCHLYVIE is a village in the parish of Kippen, situated five and a half miles therefrom, and contains three places of worship, a quoad sacra church, belonging to the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. From Port of Monteith

LARBERT,

AND THE VILLAGE OF STENHOUSE-MUIR.

LARBERT, or Larret, is a parish, the village, 3 miles from Falkirk and 8 from Stirling, being beautifully situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron. The parish contains some gentlemen's seats of the first class, among which is Kinnauld, once the residence and property of Bruce, celebrated for his travels in Abyssinia, who was born, and died, in this parish; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. At the Reformation, an ancestor of this enterprising traveller repaired the old church. The present place of worship is a handsome modern erection, with a square tower. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. The famous Falkirk cattle tryst is held on a moor in this parish, in the month of October, when 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle, and great numbers of sheep are exposed for sale. The chief manufacture is that of grates and stoves. The Established church is in the village, and there is a public Board school. Acreage of the parish, 3,963. Population in 1871, 5,280, and in 1881, 6,050, and of the village, 730.

STENHOUSE-MUIR is a small and neat village, situated about half a mile east of Larbert, in the same parish, and contains a Free church and public Board schools. Another half mile distant is the hamlet of NORTH BROOMAGE, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children—a handsome building in the style of the continental ecclesiastical architecture. Here careful and skilful tuition, varied as each case demands, succeeds in imparting a useful education to and unfolding the inherent capabilities of many children of deficient intellect, on which ordinary training would be inefficient. It is sustained partly by donation and partly by fees which are paid by the more wealthy parents. Near this institution is the Stirling District Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. Population of Stenhouse-Muir in 1871, 1,872, and in 1881, 2,650.

LENNOXTOWN AND CLACHAN OF CAMPSIE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF BALDERNOCK, CAMPSIE, STRATHBLANE, MILTON OF CAMPSIE AND TORRANCE.

LENNOXTOWN (or Newtown of Campsie) is a large village in the parish of Campsie, 42 miles w. from Edinburgh, 22 s.s.w. from Stirling, and 9 N.N.W. from Glasgow, and is a station on the Blane Valley Branch of the North British Railway. In the village is the extensive calico printing establishment of Messrs. R. Dalglish, Falconer & Co., and the Harlet & Campsie Alum Works; and in the vicinity are bleachfields and collieries. There are two comfortable hotels within one minute's walk from the railway station. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts is held at the Lennox Arms Hotel on the last Thursday in February, May, August, and November. An Established church, with a square tower, is situated in a commanding position near the centre of the village; there are also neat places of worship belonging to the Free church, the United Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics. Several schools are attached to these places of worship. The parish of Campsie lies in the central part of the county, and extends 8 miles in length by 7 in breadth. It is bounded on the north by the parish of Fintry, by Baldernock and Strathblane on the west, on the south by Cadder and Kirkintilloch, and on the east by Kilsyth. It is composed of a fertile strath or valley, bounded by ranges of the Campsie hills or fells on the north, which are elevated about 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The Clachan or town of Campsie, as it is designated, is distant rather more than a mile from Lennoxtown, and stands on the low ground at the foot of the far-famed Campsie glen, which from its romantic scenery and waterfalls is a place of great resort in the summer. The district is the residence of several persons of distinction, and ornamented by some elegant seats; those of Woodhead, Craigbaronet and Glorat are perhaps the most conspicuous. The rivers Kelvin and Glazart pass through this parish, which is intersected by the two great roads from Kippou to Glasgow and from the latter city to Edinburgh. Population in 1871, 3,917, and in 1881, 3,251.

The small village of TORRANCE, in the parish of Campsie, or, as it is generally called, the Torrance of Campsie, is about 3½ miles from Lennoxtown, on the direct road to Glasgow, and has a station on the Kelvin Valley Line of Railway.

BALDERNOCK, a parish (anciently Bathernock), is situated in the southern extremity of the county. It is bounded by the river Kelvin and Alander on the side fronting north-east, and by Campsie; and on the south-west lies the town of Baldoyle. The parish abounds with cairns and similar memorials of early warfare. The most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated "the auld wife's lit;" it consists of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and upon the top of these the third is placed, in the same direction, with their ends pointed to the north and south; the whole are 18 feet in length by 11 in breadth and 7 in depth. In the surrounding grounds there are and stumps of oak trees have been dug up, and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove and place of sacrifice. Acreage of the parish 4,322; population in 1871, 616.

STRATHBLANE parish, as its name implies, composes the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-western course through it; the land of the valley is exceedingly fertile, and is embellished by several neat villas, while the hills are clothed with natural woods. The parish lies in the south-west corner of the county, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Campsie; on the south by Baldernock and East Kilpatrick, and on the west and north by Kilsyth. The village of Strathblane is 3½ miles west from the Clachan of Campsie, and 5 east from Kilsyth. There are the extensive calico print works of the Blanefield Printing Company situated in the valley. About one mile to the west are the ruins of Duntreath Castle, and two miles south-east are the ruins of Mugdock Castle, the property of the Duke of Montrose. Acreage, 9,063; population in 1871, 1,255.

MILTON (or Milton of Campsie, as it is generally called) is a small village situated two miles east of Lennoxtown, in the parish of Campsie. There are two printworks in the neighbourhood. The village contains a public school, and there is a station on the Campsie branch railway. Population in 1871, 714.

ST. NINIANS AND BANNOCKBURN,

WITH CAMBUSBARRON, EAST PLEAN, AND WHINS OF MILTON.

ST. NINIANS is a considerable village or town in the parish of its name, about one mile from Stirling, situate on the road from that town to Glasgow. The form of the parish is irregular in its extent, but may be computed at about ten miles from east to west, and about six miles from north to south, bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Larbert, Dunipace, and Denny, on the west by Fintry and Gargunnoch, on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Leecroft, Logie, and Alloa (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted.) It derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient parish church, the steeple of which still remains, and is a distinguished curiosity. The church to which this fabric was formerly attached being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was accidentally blown up immediately before their retreat to the north. Though scarcely one stone of the body of the church was left upon another, the steeple remained uninjured. The town consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned; upon many are dates of considerable antiquity, and some of them have stones upon which various characters and implements are rudely and grotesquely carved. The dwellings, however, are for the most part whitewashed, which imparts a lively appearance to the place; and well cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. St. Ninians has long been famed for the manufacture of nails; other staples are the tanning of leather, and the manufacture of screw bolts. Acreage of the parish, 38,012; population in 1871, 10,446, and in 1881, 10,506.

BANNOCKBURN is a prosperous manufacturing village in the parish of St. Ninians, one mile from that town, situate on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. Few places of its size in Scotland have more rapidly improved of late years, in consequence of the manufactures that have taken their seat here; those consist of tweeds, tartans, and carpets to a considerable extent. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance, and a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district the country is characterised by long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Frith of Forth, and it was on one of these uplands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought on the 24th of June, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn, the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English was defeated with a loss of thirty thousand men and seven hundred knights. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greystell and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Caddan Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone" having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. About half a mile from the village of Bannockburn, at MILTOX, is pointed out the remains of the miller's house to which James III. retreated from the battle of Sauchieburn (fought in 1188), about two miles further to the south-west. The places of worship are the East Plean and Free churches, and an United Presbyterian chapel. Two fairs are held in Bannockburn—on the second Tuesday of June and October (old style.) Bannockburn with ALIX, contained in 1871 a population of 2,564, and in 1881, 4,331.

CAMBUSBARRON is a village in the parish of St. Ninians, situate one mile north-west from that place, and about the same distance west from Stirling. Extensive woollen mills belonging respectively to Messrs. R. Smith and Son, and Mr. William Smith, give employment to the majority of the inhabitants. In the immediate neighbourhood there are also some extensive limekilns. Public Board schools were erected here in 1875, at a cost of £4,000. Population returned with the parish.

About three miles from Bannockburn is the village of EAST PLEAN, containing a hospital for the accommodation of old and indigent men, more especially soldiers and sailors. Colonel Francis Simpson, of East Plean, who died in 1831, was the donor, having bequeathed upwards of £8,000 for the purpose. The establishment contains about thirty inmates, who are fed, clothed, and have a small allowance of pocket money; the trustees granted the land on which a church has been erected in connection with the church of Scotland.

STIRLING,

CAMBUSKENNETH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STIRLING is an ancient town, the capital of the county and parish of its name, and a royal and parliamentary burgh; 35 miles w. by n. from Edinburgh, 28 n. by e. from Glasgow, 33½ s.w. from Perth, 11 n.w. from Falkirk, 7 w. from Alloa, and 6 s. from Dunblane. Like the old town of Edinburgh, Stirling is situated on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous end of which, towards the west, is occupied by the castle. The prospects from hence are most delightful and extensive; towards the east, especially, they are enhanced by the windings of the Forth, the ruins of the Abbey of Cambuskenneth, the tower of which has been renovated and ornamented at great expense, the Abbey Craig, with Wallace's monument on the summit, and the City of Edinburgh in the distance. While the situation of Stirling is thus one of the most pleasing and picturesque in the country, it is a place noted for its antiquities and the historical associations connected with them. The origin of the name of Stirling is surrounded in great uncertainty. In all the old records it is entitled Stryveline or Stryveling, a word of obscure etymology, which has been modified into Sterling and Stirling—the latter its now accepted appellation. The town standing, as it does, on the declivity of a hill, the streets are in general clean; the principal streets are Broad street, King street, Port street, Murray place, and Baker street. Broad street is of a spacious and imposing appearance, lying along the inclined plane like the High street of Edinburgh; there are, leading towards the castle, several diverging streets. The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, in King street, the Royal Hotel, in Barnton place, and the Star in Baker street, all combining comfort and economy, with strict attention to the wants of visitors.

As was the case with Edinburgh, Stirling arose as a suburb in contiguity with the castle. The latter stands on a basaltic rock, and around it is a pleasant walk, carried from the town, in many places cut out of the solid rock; from this walk are several very interesting views, and it affords an excellent opportunity for examining the basaltic pillars of which the rock is composed. On the south side of the castle is a flat enclosed piece of ground, called the "Valley;" it was the spot where tournaments were held, and on one side is a place where the ladies used to sit and witness the feats of valour of the combatants, which is still designated the ladies' "rock." This piece of ground is now tastefully laid out as a cemetery, and is quite in keeping with the beautiful scenery by which it is environed; it contains several handsome monuments, chiefly the martyrs of the Reformation. On the low ground immediately below this rock is situated the "King's garden," a moderately sized field, completely surrounded by a canal, now filled up; in the midst of which is a curious artificial mound of octagonal form, called the "King's knot," which appears to have been a miniature of a regularly fortified place, but which tradition recognises as the scene of some forgotten play or recreation, which the king, with his court, was accustomed to enjoy here. The palace, within the castle walls, is a stately structure, externally in the form of a square, and very richly and curiously ornamented with grotesque figures standing upon pillars or pedestals, in good preservation. For several centuries Stirling Castle was little else than a single tower; at the end of the 11th century it rose into consequence, and in the course of the succeeding century it attained the distinction of being one of the four principal fortresses in the kingdom. Such it continued during the sanguinary and protracted contest which Edward I. of England, commenced for the subjugation of Scotland, when it was frequently taken and re-taken, after tedious sieges, and under circumstances which prove its great strength and importance at that period. In the course of that eventful struggle between independence and usurpation. Stirling and its vicinity formed the theatre of some of the most brilliant achievements of Sir William Wallace; of these none were so remarkable as the battle of Stirling, fought on 13th September, 1297, in which the English army was signally defeated with great slaughter, and the eventual battle of Bannockburn, fought by Robert the Bruce, on the 24th of June, 1314. Stirling Castle first became a favourite residence of royalty about the reign of James I., whose son, James II., was born in it. In the reign of Queen Anne the fortifications of the castle were considerably extended; and it is declared in the articles of treaty of union with England, to be one of the four fortresses in Scotland which were ever after to be kept in repair. Since that period it has experienced little change in external aspect, except its being gradually rendered more and more a modern barracks for the accommodation of soldiers. It is commanded by a lieutenant-colonel, and has a chaplain and a barrack master, who is likewise storekeeper. Perhaps one of the most interesting places in the castle is a room in the west building of the quadrangle, known as the "Douglas Room," so called from being the apartment in which William, eighth earl of Douglas, was killed with a dagger by the hand of King James II. On the evening of the 18th of November, 1555, it was almost destroyed by fire, but since it has been as nearly as possible restored to its original appearance. From wood saved from the fire were made mementoes, which were readily bought by the tourist; and on the occasion of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Stirling in 1864, the Princess was graciously pleased to accept from Mr. Crawford, bookseller, a copy of the "Lady of the Lake," handsomely bound in the oak of the Douglas room.

Stirling as a royal burgh is one of high antiquity, having received its charter from Alexander I. in 1119. It is governed by a provost, who is also high sheriff, the only provost in Scotland holding this important office, four bailies, who are also sheriffs, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, who are elected according to the terms of the Scottish Burgh Reform Bill, which has also enlarged the limits of the burgh in so far as the parliamentary elective franchise is concerned; and for that purpose it comprehends St. Ninians, and other small villages and hamlets. The burgh, in conjunction, with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline, returns one member to Parliament. Being the county town, the courts of the sheriff are held here, and are attended by a number of procurators resident in the place. The chief manufactures of Stirling are carpets, tartans, tweeds, wineys, and shawls, for which it has been long noted, and these branches engage a considerable number of weavers. There is also a large wool spinning factory, and two coach making establishments, which employ several hundred workmen. The other leading avocations are tanning, nail making, and agricultural implement making. There are seven banking establishments settled here; they are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, National Bank of Scotland, Limited; the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited; the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited; the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited; and the British Linen Company's Bank, besides a National Security Savings Bank. Some shipping trade is carried on, and at certain periods of the tide steam vessels from Granton afford a cheap, expeditious, and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

There has sprung up in Southfield and Spittals park, the property of Spittals Hospital, what may be called the west end of the town. A large area is covered with beautiful urban villas, squares and crescents, and these all being in the immediate neighbourhood of the King's park, renders them very pleasant places of residence. The approaches to the town, on every side, are truly grand, and probably equalled by few and excelled by none in Scotland; large sums have been expended upon the main streets, and to good purpose, for few towns are better paved, or lighted with purer gas, than Stirling; it is also well supplied with excellent water, brought to the town from a distance of about three miles; so that Stirling is perhaps one of the most pleasant towns for residence, as well as one of the most beautiful in the three kingdoms. The Town House, which stands in Broad street, has a lofty tower, with a clock and a set of musical chimes; behind it is the gaol. New court houses have been erected in Viewfield gardens in a substantial and elegant style. At the top of King street is the Athenaeum, a handsome edifice with a fine lofty spire and a clock, which has four faces; the ground flat is occupied as shops, and the upper flat contains the County Hall and town clerk's office; the front of the building is circular, thus giving a much greater facility of entrance to the two streets which branch out here. Smith Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone with a portico front; it was founded by the late Thomas Smith, Esq. of Glassingall, at a cost of £5,000, who also left sufficient funds for its future maintenance; the town gave the site. The building embraces a reading room, library, museum and picture gallery, all of which are open to the public free, the provost and others being appointed trustees. The Stirling Tract Depot is a handsome building, erected at a cost of nearly £5,000, situated at the corner of King street and Murray place; it forms a prominent feature from the style of architecture, which is a combination of modern Italian, with some of the more picturesque features of early Norman. The windows of the ground storey are crowned with heads sculptured in stone, of Luther, Wycliffe, Knox, Guthrie, Whitfield and Chalmers; provision has been made for handing over the whole property to trustees for its permanent maintenance as an Evangelistic agency. The Corn Exchange situated near the Athenaeum, is a large and commodious structure used as a market place.

Near to the castle are two churches of the Establishment, besides which there is one in Murray place, in the Norman style of architecture, and there are several others belonging to various sects of Dissenters. A handsome Free church is also situated in Murray place. A monument, in the Grecian style of architecture, has been erected at a cost of upwards of £500, in front of the United Presbyterian chapel, St. John street, in memory of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the first seceders from the Establishment. In 1836, a poor house, hospital and lunatic asylum, were erected at a cost of £7,000. Stirling has long been celebrated for its schools and hospitals, some of the latter are foundations of long standing, and are well endowed—their titles and localities will be found under their appropriate heads at a subsequent page. Three newspapers are issued from the press of this town every week, namely, the Stirling Observer, the Stirling Journal and Advertiser, and the Stirling Reporter. They are papers of considerable repute, and deservedly enjoy a large share of patronage. Stirling, long the seat of Scottish kings and the classic site of the most interesting scenes in Scottish history, is now the peaceful centre of the richest and best cultivated district in Scotland.

Three miles from Stirling are the mineral springs of AIRTHEY, rapidly and deservedly rising into notice; they are situated in a charming locality close beside the Bridge of Allan, now a large and thriving village, containing many elegant mansions and villas. On the Abbey Craig, a distance of two miles east from Stirling, has been erected the Wallace monument, a noble structure to the memory of Sir William Wallace, fitly built on the crag on which Wallace's army encamped the night before the battle of Stirling Bridge. On the 24th of November, 1877, a monument to King Robert the Bruce, occupying a commanding position in front of Stirling Castle and overlooking the battlefields of Stirling and Bannockburn, was unveiled by Lady Alexander. There are four charities or mortifications connected with the town of Stirling, particulars of which are given in the list of Public Buildings, &c.

A weekly market is held at Stirling every Friday. The fairs are held on the first Friday in February, for horses; the last Friday in May for cattle and horses; the first Friday in March, April, May, and August, for cattle; the third Friday in October and the second Friday in December for hiring servants. According to the returns for 1871, the town of Stirling contained a population of 14,279, which in 1881 had increased to 16,013.

CAMBUSKENNETH is a small village in the parish of Logie, county of Clackmannan, situate opposite to Stirling, on the north side of the river Forth, on one of the peninsulas formed by the windings of the river, near to which is the tall and desolate ruin of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded by David I., in 1147, and once a pile of great magnitude. Within the precincts of the abbey, James III., and his queen were interred; during some excavations recently made among the ruins, the royal remains were discovered, and were afterwards re-interred, and a beautiful tombstone, erected at the expense of Her Majesty, marks the spot.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is a Highland county, and one of the most northerly districts in Scotland. Its form presents five sides, that on the east being bounded by Caithness-shire for about thirty-seven miles, that on the south and south-west by Ross-shire, that on the south and south-east, for a distance of thirty-three miles, by the Moray Firth, and its sides on the west and north are washed by the Atlantic and the North Sea. It has an area of 1,886 square miles, or 1,207,188 acres. A small portion only of the shire is under cultivation.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of one uninterrupted succession of wild mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets of the sea and bays, and variegated by imposing promontories, among which latter Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland the first named including the northern part and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—The Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from three hundred to eight hundred feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oickel; and the western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is still more wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountain of greatest altitude in the shire is that of Glaschen, which rises 2,000 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland which was subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of that civilisation which had been so beneficially spread over the rest of Britain. The great barrier which impeded improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two powerfully-moving circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the extraordinary and patriotic exertions made by the noble family of Sutherland and Stafford, and the second was the well-judged liberality of Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the highlands. When it proposed to place turnpike gates on the principal line the noble proprietor said, "It will shut out the thoroughfare of passengers, of which we have too few; and, regarding the tenantry, I see no benefit in lowering rent with one hand, while with the other I impose tolls upon them." Thus, under the fostering care of a late Duke of Sutherland as well as that of his Duchess, the aspect of the county has been most agreeably changed. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and finely swelling green hills, as well as its climate (which is superior to that of Caithness-shire), eminently adapt it. Under the various improvements of store farming the county rears 200,000 Cheviot sheep, of which 20,000 are annually exported, besides 89,000 fleeces of wool. From the fishing stations on the coast the county annually exports from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels of herrings, besides cod, ling, &c. Nor is the business of tillage neglected. The agriculture of the shire is now equal to that of the Lothians, and the soil, being of a sandy opened-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of grain. The exports of farm produce, &c. have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland. The building of houses has been greatly facilitated by the abundance of sandstone, limestone, and slate, found in different parts of the county. The principal rivers are the Brora, Borgie, Naver, Helmsdale, Hollodale, Laxford, Inechar, Inver, Shin, Strath-Fleet, Strathmore, and Gruke. The line of railway which gives to this county railway communication is the Highland line.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Sutherlandshire comprises thirteen parishes and part of one other. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in returning one member, and the county at large sends another. The member at present sitting for the county is the Marquis of Stafford. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-82 was 886. The Duke of Sutherland, K.G., is the Lord Lieutenant. The population in 1871 amounted to 24,317—11,408 males and 12,909 females; in 1881 the number returned was 23,366, viz., 11,213 males and 12,153 females, a decrease of 951. The number of inhabited houses at the last-mentioned period was 4,841; uninhabited, 208; building, 26.

The noted cave of Smoo is about a mile from Durness Inn. 1871 the population of the parish was 1,049, and in 1881, 987.

EDDRACHILLIS (or Eddrachyllis) is a parish on the coast of West Sutherland, and contains the villages of SCOURIE, GLENDUCE and LOCHBERVIE. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,530, and in 1881, 1,523.

DORNOCH,

CLASHMORE AND BONAR BRIDGE IN CREICH.

DORNOCH is a small town and royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and of the county of Sutherland, nine miles from Tain, and eleven from Golspie, healthfully and pleasantly situated near the mouth of the river Portnaculter, now generally called the Firth of Dornoch, and opposite to Tain, which lies on the south side of the estuary. Dornoch is an ancient place, and was the residence of the bishops of Caithness even before the 12th century. The cathedral church was then erected here by Bishop Gilbert Moray, but in the year 1570, some hostile tribes of the neighbouring country took advantage of the minority of Alexander, Earl of Sutherland, made a sudden irruption into the town and among other barbarous acts set fire to the venerable edifice, after a desperate resistance by the inhabitants, who succeeded, however, in preserving the old tower that still remains. On the 5th November, 1805 (the day of the discovery of the gunpowder plot), a range of handsome stone pillars which supported some Gothic arches that had escaped destruction were prostrated by a violent gale of wind. In 1614 the Earl of Sutherland commenced the repair of a part of the cathedral, and subsequent alterations converted it into an ordinary plain church; but during the year, 1886, the late Duchess Countess of Sutherland restored the structure to its original dimensions and Gothic proportions; and now, with its projecting abutments and arched windows (all carefully copied from the remaining fragment of the edifice), and adorned with Gothic grolings along the lofty and long roof of the aisles, the Dornoch cathedral is the handsomest erection of its kind in the north of Scotland. The remains of the late Duke of Sutherland repose in the east aisle, where is placed a beautiful marble statue of that deeply lamented nobleman, executed by Chantrey, also a tablet to the late Duchess. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains; but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its comparative importance since the triumph of the Reformation. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628; and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with six councillors. In connection with certain other burghs before named, it enjoys a parliamentary representation. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county, and the free navigation of the Firth being obstructed by the same bar of dangerous sandbanks mentioned in the account of Tain. Of late years some extensive buildings have been erected, regular and neat; two of these are very handsome, one contains the town and county room, sheriff clerk's room, &c.; the other the volunteer armoury (formerly the town and county gaol), and also a very neat police station for the county. There is a public school, and a Society school. The neighbourhood of Dornoch is very pleasant and a short distance hence are some good sea bathing stations. Within four miles, situate on the rising ground, is the neat and picturesque castle of Skelbo, erected by the late Duke of Sutherland, as a home farm and a rural retreat during the residence of His Grace in the north; it is now in the tenancy of its former manager, Mr. T. Barclay.

The scenery about here is diversified, and combines the home grounds laid out with the best taste, and surrounded by distant spots alternately romantic and beautifully picturesque, with wood and water, hill and dale. There are two public fairs or markets held annually in the town, on the first Thursday in November, and the other on the first Wednesday in December. These fairs were formerly wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country; but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places, and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, these fairs are but thinly attended. In 1771 the parish of Dornoch contained a population of 2,764, and in 1881, 2,522; of this number the burgh had 496.

CLASHMORE is a modern and thriving village, about three miles west from Dornoch, situated partly on the estate of Sutherland and partly on that of Skibo, being divided only by a small burn which separates these properties, and by the parliamentary road to Caithness, which passes through the village. A neat and comfortable inn, the Sutherland Arms, affords every accommodation required by visitors; it was erected some years since by the Duchess Countess of Sutherland, at an expense of £1,000 sterling, and is much frequented by travellers. Within half a mile from the village is the beautiful seat and residence of Evan Charles Sutherland-Walker, Esq., of Skibo; on the site of this mansion there formerly, for centuries, stood a castle, with a garrison, under the charge of a general officer as governor; around it many bloody conflicts took place, but its retention having become unnecessary in these peaceful times, it was demolished, and the present castle of modern architecture erected instead. The celebrated, noble, and brave, but ill-fated Marquis of Montrose, in the year 1650, lodged two nights as a prisoner in the Castle of Skibo, after his unfortunate defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by the avaricious and treacherous Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who basely betrayed and delivered him up to his enemies. An extensive fair is held on the first Monday of May, at Clashmore. Population included with that of Dornoch.

BONAR BRIDGE is a considerable village in the parish of Creich, 15 miles west from Tain, and 18 miles from Cornoch, situate on the great north mail road, and on the north side of the Firth of Dornoch, which is here crossed by an elegant iron bridge, erected by Government at a cost of £13,971. Fairs are held in the village on the second Monday in April, June, July, August, September, and October. Population in 1871, 907, and in 1881, 813.

GOLSPIE,

RORA, KILDONAN, HELMSDALE, ROGART, CLYNE AND LOTH.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter neat and respectable—eleven miles from Dornoch and twenty from Tain, pleasantly situated on the east coast of the county. Before the commencement of the present century, Golspie was principally inhabited by fishermen, but is now the most important and prosperous village in the shire. The great parliamentary road passes through it, and it is a station on the Highland railway which connects it with Inverness. A branch of the Town and County Bank Limited and another of the British Linen Company, are established here. A convenient pier, accessible at low water, constructed in the safe harbour of the ferry three miles and a half distant, is a valuable improvement to the village and its neighbourhood. The parish church, a small but convenient building, erected in 1619, and kept in good repair, stands within a well-enclosed burial ground, surrounded by thriving trees; and at the west end of the village the Free church is situated; schools are in connection with both these places of worship. Golspie owes its increasing prosperity to its eligible situation in the centre of the arable district, and to the direct communication established between it and the distant west and north coasts. The vicinage of Golspie is peculiarly distinguished and adorned by Duoroibin Castle, the chief and princely seat of the Duke of Sutherland, situated within a mile of the village. The castle is known to have existed in the twelfth century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family fortress of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland. Of its ancient appearance it has almost become divested, and given place to a particularly chaste and characteristic style of architecture. The principal entrance is through a long avenue of trees, terminating which the noble building bursts upon the sight. The view from the castle's summit is remarkably fine, and comprises all that can give effect to a delightful landscape, including the tastefully laid out gardens and grounds, the finely wooded burn and waterfall in Duoroibin Glen, and the picturesque mountain of Ben-Bhraggle, towering over all to the height of thirteen hundred feet. Upon the summit of this eminence has been placed a lofty monument to the memory of the late Duke of Sutherland. The interior of the castle is no less to be admired than the beauties that surround it; and the works of art with which it is decorated are various and costly, the paintings especially being of the first merit; while the apartments altogether are magnificent in their furniture and dimensions. The view from the sea likewise possesses great interest. The building from this point is seen to great advantage, exhibiting its noble tiers of balconies, and numerous spires, its windows of stained glass, its gardens and beautiful fountains, &c. Near the village a handsome memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription, to perpetuate the remembrance of the many virtues of that noble lady. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,804, and in 1881, 1,450.

BRORA is a village in the parish of CLYNE, about twelve miles from Helmsdale and five from Golspie. Its trade is of a domestic nature; the curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood. The parish is large, being twenty-four miles in length by from four to eight in breadth, extending inland to Strathbeg, through which flows a tributary to the Brora water, a narrow and rapid stream, abounding with excellent salmon. Within the last few years great improvements have been made in this district by His Grace the Duke of Sutherland. Coal has been found and is at present worked to a considerable extent. Two fairs are held, one on the second Thursday of October, and the other on the Friday after the first Wednesday in May. Population of Clyne parish in 1871, 1,733; and in 1881, 1,812.

HELMSDALE is a modern village in the parish of KILDONAN, 60 miles S. by W. from Wick, and 17 N.E. from Golspie; situated at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward. The houses are substantial, the streets are regular, and its harbour is excellent; during the season for the herring fishery large fleets of boats resort here. The places for curing are the most complete and the best adapted on the coast for pursuing this branch to a great extent. The river that flows through the extensive strath of Kildonan abounds with salmon. Just opposite the town stand the ruins of an old castle, which serve as a landmark to mariners. The places of worship are two churches, one of the Establishment, the other a Free church. There is a public school, also one for young ladies. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is established here. Population of Kildonan parish in 1871, 1,916, and in 1881, 1,985.

LOTH is a parish on Dornoch Frith, 10 miles N.W. of Brora; in length it is about 14 miles. The last person who suffered death for reputed witchcraft was burnt here about 1720. A public school and an Established church are in the village. Population of the parish in 1871, 583, and in 1881, 591.

ROGART is a parish on the Dornoch Frith, 10 miles W. from Golspie. The inhabitants, with the exception of a few employed at the two linen manufactories, are principally of the labouring class. There are an Established and a Free church in the parish, and three public schools. Population of the parish in 1881, 1,227.

WIGTONSHIRE.

THIS county, which forms the western part of the ancient district of Galloway, occupies the south-western extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east by the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright (or Eastern Galloway), also by Wigton Bay; on the south and west it is girded by the Irish sea, and on the north by the county of Ayr. The extent of the shire from north to south is about thirty miles, and (including Luce Bay) its breadth from east to west about the same. The superficial contents of the county (adopting a medium calculation between conflicting authorities) may be taken at 480 square miles, of which, about one-half, perhaps, is cultivated. The Bay of Luce indents the land to the extent of 15 miles, and forms two promontories. At the southern extremity of the western projection is the Mull of Galloway, while the apex on the eastern is called Burrow Head. These two peninsular headlands are also known by the Celtic name of the Rhynns (Rhyns or Rinos) of Galloway. On the north of the county another promontory is formed by the intersection of Loch Ryan. In ordinary language the district is divided into Upper and Lower Galloway, which designates the northern or high, and the southern or lower parts of the shire.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the epoch of the Roman power obtruding itself into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the Novantes inhabited the whole of Eastern or Western Galloway, having Leucophibia (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and Kerignium (Loch Ryan), for their principal port. The Anglo-Saxon overran the district in the sixth century; and Oswie, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the ninth or tenth centuries the country on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or “the country of the Gael,” was conferred on the territory. About the twelfth century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary contests which originated in the competition of Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct; it was revived however, and now bestows an earldom on the distinguished family of Stewart and Garlies. The Maxwellis of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners, and language lingered long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Whilst these distinctions remained, the inhabitants were conspicuous for rudeness bordering on ferocity. Their chief derived his authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftain and his vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours, making reckless incursions into the territories of those that had the misfortune to dwell in the proximity of these half civilised marauders.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from the encumbrance of rocks. The best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year, usually accompanied with rains; yet, when proper attention is exercised by the agriculturist, the moisture of the climate is but seldom injurious to the products of the earth. Snow rarely lies long, and frosts are not generally severe or of tedious duration. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively. The salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been, with some justice, ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. The spirit and practice of husbandry gradually spread from that shire to Kirkcudbright, and, thence from Ayrshire, penetrated into Wigtonshire. Since that period rents have risen rapidly, and corn and other products of tillage, black cattle, wool, sheep, and swine are now largely exported. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool. The mineral resources of this county are by no means extensive. There is no coal, at least for any useful purpose; and although there is plenty of iron ore, the absence of the former article renders the latter of comparatively little value. In the northern part of the Rhinns the existence of sandstone has been ascertained. Quarries of slate, of different qualities, are found in various places, and lead mines were formerly wrought within the district. The shipping trade of Wigtonshire has felt, like all maritime counties, the impetus of steam navigation. The ports of Stranraer, Wigton, and Whithorn derive considerable benefit from this mighty power; and at one time Portpatrick was the station for the mail steam packets communicating with Ireland; the removal of which to Glasgow and Greenock has been a severe blow to the prosperity of this interesting little port. The coasting trade of this county is considerable, and is steadily increasing, giving employment to a large number of mariners. In 1688 the number of boats belonging to this shire was four, while at the present time they may be numbered by hundreds. There is also considerable activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, so that, combining the various sources of agriculture, commerce, and the fisheries, Wigtonshire may be pronounced an active and prosperous county.

RIVERS AND MOUNTAINS.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladnoch, and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtonshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton-Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigton Bay. The Bladnoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of twenty-four miles, falls into Wigton Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of twenty-one miles, unites with the Bladnoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are Lang, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014; and Barhullion, 814. The Caledonian Railway offers extensive facilities for communication with other important towns and counties.

DIVISIONS AND REPRESENTATION, &c.—Wigtonshire comprehends seventeen parishes, and has three royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Wigton, Stranraer, and Whithorn; with these is associated New Galloway in returning one member to Parliament, and the county at large sends another. The member at present sitting for the county is Sir Herbert Eustace Maxwell, Bart. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-2 numbered 1,700. The Earl of Stair, K.T. is Lord Lieutenant of the county. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton-Stewart, Garlieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce, and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports or natural harbours, and is ornamented by many handsome mansions and elegant seats of its nobility and gentry. In 1871 the population was returned as 17,879 males and 20,951 females, total, 38,830. In 1881 the figures given were:—males, 18,112; females, 20,450; total, 38,562, which shows a decrease of 228. At the latter period the shire contained 7,435 inhabited houses, 453 uninhabited, and 55 in course of erection.

GARLIESTON AND SORBIE.

GARLIESTON is a sea-port village in the parish of Sorbie, finely situated at the head of Garlieston bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigton bay). From the pier-head the Ross light bears S.E. by E. For distance—See Sorbie. The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour capable of receiving a great number of vessels; the tide at the spring flow rises eighteen feet. A regular steam communication is maintained between this port and Liverpool once a fortnight, and there are traders occasionally. The Broughton and Pontenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Galloway House, a fine mansion, the seat of the Earl of Galloway, erected in 1740, is adjacent on the south, and at present occupied by Henry T. Broadhurst, Esq. on short lease; it is surrounded by beautiful plantations, and the grounds about it, for several miles, are extremely picturesque, and the prospect on every side delightful. Garlieston is a station on the Wigtonshire Railway. Population in 1871, 683, and in 1881, 649.

SORBIE (or Sorby) is a parish and village—the latter 39 miles E. from Portpatrick, 30 S.E. from Stranraer, 13 s. from Newton-Stewart, and 6 s. from Wigton; situated in a fine part of the county, and surrounded by land in a high state of cultivation. The parish is of an irregular figure, extending along the shore about twelve miles, and varying in breadth from two to six miles inland. The chief bays in the parish are Garlieston and Rigg, with the ports of Allane Whaple, and Innerwell; these bays and ports are very convenient for shipping, and well adapted for the prosecution of the fisheries.

The headlands are Cruggleton and Eagerness; upon these are the remains of two strong castles, one of which, Cruggleton Castle, gives the name to the promontory. It is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1093, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies, or McKerlies, who retained possession until the Reformation. Previously they owned Carleton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Catholics obtained in 1324. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot. It was taken by treachery, and Sir William retook it for his friend William Kerlie, who was thereby restored to his patrimonial castle and territory. This is fully mentioned in Paterson's "Wallace and Times." Eagerness was also built by the Danes, but no particular account has been handed down. About a mile to the east of the kirk are the gradually mouldering outlines of Sorbie tower, formerly belonging to the Hannay family. The Wigtonshire railway runs close by the village. A new church was opened in 1877. It is a fine Gothic structure, cruciform in shape, with tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. It is situated at Millisle, about one mile from Garlieston, and two from Sorbie. Sorbie belonged to a family called Sorby, now changed to Sorbie. The Hannays did not get it until a much later period. Sorbie parish, which embraces an area of 91,611 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 1,667, and in 1881, 1,639; and the village 255 of that number.

GLENLUCE AND NEW LUCE.

GLENLUCE is a village in the parish of Old Luce, 19 miles E. by N. from Portpatrick, 18 W. from Wigton, 16 S.W. from Newton-Stewart, and 10 E. by S. from Stranraer; situated on the banks of the river Luce, and on the public road, at the head of Luce bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels. The country around is interesting and picturesque, and abounds with game of almost every kind. The church is a neat edifice, remarkable only for its simplicity; there is also a Free church, and a chapel for United Presbyterians, and Board schools. About a mile to the north of the church, further up the vale (from which the village takes its name), are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rollo, Lord of Galloway, in 1190. When in its perfect state it must have been an extensive building. The vast mass of separate fragments at present cover about an acre and a half of ground, notwithstanding the quantities that have been carried away. The only part now remaining entire is a small apartment on the east side of the square, within which latter stood the cloisters; in the middle of this apartment stand a pillar, about fourteen feet high, from which eight arches spring. Tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory, to have been at one time abbot of this establishment, and adds that his magical library still exists under a particular part of the ruins; to ascertain which a person excavated part of the ground and found many curiosities, together with several skeletons in an upright position; the explorer, however, having been seized with insanity, further search was interrupted, and the superstitious of the people prevented others from pursuing the investigation. The Dumfries and Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian line runs through the town. The principal hotel is the King's Arms. There is a monthly fair or market held here (for cattle) from the first Friday in the month of April to the first Friday in December. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,445.

The village of New Luce is five miles north from Glenluce, situated on the Luce, where the Cross water falls into that river. This district, which, until the year 1646 formed part of the parish of Old Luce, extends about ten miles in length by from five to six in breadth. It consists of high and low ground; of the former, the greater proportion is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. The parish church, a plain building, and a Free church are the places of worship; there is also a Board school. This is a station on the Girvan and Portpatrick Junction Railway. New Luce, which embraces 28,877 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 631, and in 1881, 703.

KIRKCOWAN

Is a parish and village, the latter 10 miles from Glenluce, 8 from Wigtown, and 7 from Newton-Stewart, situated on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Bladnoch. There are woollen manufactories adjoining the village, belonging respectively to Messrs. William Armstrong and Son, and Mr. William Milroy, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. The Portpatrick Railway passes within a quarter of a mile of the village. The principal hotel is the Commercial. The church, which is a very neat edifice, was erected in 1838; its site, as well as the ground occupied by the church yard, were given by the late Captain W. C. Hamilton, of Craighlaw. There is a chapel for the United Presbyterians, and Board schools. The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland interspersed with pieces of arable land. It extends from north to south 15 miles, by a general breadth of about five, and it is well watered by the Tarf and Bladnoch streams. Acreage of the parish, 35,865; population in 1871, 1,352, and in 1891, 1,306.

KIRKMAIDEN, DRUMORE, STONEYKIRK,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of KIRKMAIDEN occupies nearly the whole of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtonshire, projecting into the mouth of the Solway Frith, and tapering to a point that inclines to the east. This parish, which comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, is about 2 n miles in length and from 2 to 4½ in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and feeds numbers of black cattle. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves scooped out by the endless operations of the sea, and particularly by its furious lashings against the opposing barrier in stormy weather; on both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. At Portuissock is a harbour, constructed at the expense of the late Andrew M'Douall, Esq. then proprietor, who exerted himself to improve this locality. There is also a tolerable harbour at Drumore; here the coast-guard have a station, under the command of a lieutenant of the royal navy. Oyster fishings are now carried on at Drumore in great activity by the local boats, under the surveillance of the crown lessees, and the value of the produce annually raised from these fishings averages about twenty thousand pounds. The church, a plain edifice, is situate near the centre of the parish, not far from Drumore bay, 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 from Wigtown, 36 from Newton-Stewart, 20 from Stranraer, and 16 from Portpatrick. On the estate of James M'Douall, Esq. of Logan, is a fish pond well worthy the inspection of visitors; it is hewn out of the solid rock, and has communication with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron grating; some of the fish in this artificial reservoir have been rendered so tame that they will feed from the hand. The parish of Kirkmaiden, which embraces 13,790 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 2,507, and in 1881, 2,409.

The parish of STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk), lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, six miles from Stranraer and about the same distance from Portpatrick. On the east and south-east is the bay of Glenluce. The parish, which extends about 7 miles in length by from 8 to 5 in breadth, comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clachshant and Toskerton. The surface is generally hilly, moorish, and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. On the estate of Mrs. Matilda Maitland, in this district is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in the time of war; there is likewise another of a similar kind on the estate of the late Sir John M'Taggart, of Ardwell House. The parish of Stoneykirk contains 19,480 acres; population in 1871, 2,093, and in 1881, 2,766.

NEWTON STEWART,

AND THE PARISHES OF PENNINGHAM, MINNIEAFF AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town and burgh of barony 121 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 82 s. from Glasgow, 52 w. from Danfries, 26 w. from Stranraer, and 8 n. from Wigton; situated on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, on the right bank of the river Cree, in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnieaff. It is a station on the Dumfries and Portpatrick section of the Caledonian line, and is also the junction for the Wigtonshire railway, to Garlieston and Whithorn. The town owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which he gave the name of Newton Stewart. About the year 1778 the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas, Esq., of Carlingwark, who founded the town of Castle-Douglas, when it was created a burgh of barony, under the title of Newton-Douglas, but it subsequently resumed its original name. About twenty-five years ago the houses consisted but of one story, and were covered with thatch, but the greater portion are now two stories in height, and slated. The town is principally composed of one large street, in the centre of which is the town-house. The Cree is crossed by a very handsome bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town. The government of the town is vested in the justices of the peace and nine commissioners elected by the ratepayers. The cotton manufacture was formerly carried on here and in the neighbourhood to a considerable extent, but it is now completely extinct. The staple at present is wool, furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Lancashire markets. There are two tanneries and a brewery in the town. The places of worship are the Established church, which is considered to be the most elegant modern ecclesiastical structure in the south of Scotland, a Free church, an United Presbyterian church and a Roman Catholic chapel. The Douglas Academy, founded by Samuel Douglas, Esq., of Jamaica, and the Ewart Institute, founded by James and John Ewart, merchants, of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments. A very handsome Gothic monument to Randolph, ninth earl of Galloway, was erected in 1875, at a cost of £1,000. An institution called the Industrial Home has been founded by a benevolent ladies, for the support of about forty destitute and orphan girls. There is a Mechanics' Institute in the town in a very flourishing condition; it is liberally supported by the gentry of the neighbourhood, the newsroom being supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and is open to the public every evening; the library contains about one thousand volumes. The British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, have each a branch in this thriving town. There are three excellent hotels, the Galloway Arms, the Grapes and the Crown.

Agricultural improvement has been carried on to a great and beneficial extent in this district. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Minnieaff parish there is a large moor hill, where David Graham, brother to Crichtons, and superior of this district prior to the revolution, administered justice. About three miles to the north of the town are the remains of Castle-Stewart, formerly belonging (as before stated) to a branch of the Galloway family, but now in possession of Edward James Stopford Blair, Esq., of Penningham. New works have during the present (1882) year been completed for providing the town with water by gravitation, the source of supply being the Coldstream Burn, about four miles distant. About half way between the intake at the burn and the town a tank and filter have been constructed, the former having a capacity of 100,000 gallons. The water is conveyed in 3-inch cast-iron pipes, and distributed in pipes varying from 5 to 2 inches in diameter. The cost of the works was upwards of £1000. The weekly market is held on Friday; cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual fairs on the second Friday in February, April and October, the Friday before Dumfries horse fair in November, and the Friday after the 15th of June (old style). According to the returns for 1871 the population of Newton Stewart was 2,573, and by those for 1881, 2,612.

The parish of PENNINGHAM (or Penninghame) extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about fifteen miles, by a breadth of from three to five; bounded by Wigton on the south and Kirkcubright on the west. The greater part of the district is moorland and uncultivated, chiefly adapted to pasture. Acreage, 33,435; population in 1871, 3,940, and in 1881, 3,753.

MINNIEAFF is a large parish in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcubright, bounded on the west by the Cree, over which is a bridge (before noticed), forming the communication with the parish of Penningham and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is 17 miles in length and 11 in breadth. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which stream being navigable for several miles, has been of much benefit to agriculture. This river likewise produces excellent fish of various kinds, and abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to agriculture, and sustains large flocks of sheep, and numerous herds of black cattle. There are two places of worship—one each of the Established and Free churches. Within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Maingaff, is Kinnachtré, beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by tasteful serpentine walks. A romantic grotto in the grounds is formed out of an old stone quarry and is well worth inspection. Acreage of the parish, 23,130; population in 1871, 1,529, and in 1881, 1,331.

PORT WILLIAM AND MOCHRUM.

PORT WILLIAM is a prosperous village in the parish of Mochrum, 24 miles N.E. from Stranraer, 15 S.S.E. from Glenluce, and 9 W. from Whithorn, situated on the bay of Glenluce. The harbour, though small, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported to Liverpool and Lancaster. In the vicinity is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of Sir Herbert E. Maxwell, Bart., M.P. proprietor of the place. The mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the bay of Glenluce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man, and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old parish church, now occupied as a place of sepulchre by the family of Maxwells, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. The houses in general are very well built, and afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists during the bathing season.

The principal hotel is the Monreith Arms. The places of worship are a chapel each of the Free and United Presbyterians. There are also commodious Board schools. Population in 1871, 829, and in 1881, 749.

The parish of Mochrum is about ten miles in length, and extends inland between four and five miles. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient and picturesque building, in an inland part of the parish. It was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, Knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquiss of Bute, who has recently made alterations at considerable expense. The village of Mochrum, which is about a mile and a half from Port William, contains nothing worthy of mention, except the parish church and Board school. Acreage of the parish, 24,071; population in 1871, 2,450, and in 1881, 2,300.

POST OFFICE, PORT WILLIAM, Agnes G. Maltman, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at half-past eleven morning, and are despatched at a quarter-past five evening.

PORTPATRICK

Is a parish and seaport town, the latter 123 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 89 s.s.w. from Glasgow, between 24 and 35 w. from Wigtown, the same distance w. by s. from Newton Stewart, and rather more than 8 s. by w. from Stranraer; it is distant from Dublin 117 miles, from Belfast 86, and from Donaghadee 21 (19 nautical) miles. It is situated on the coast of the North Channel, and has long been the great thoroughfare from the north of Ireland, being the nearest point of Great Britain to that country, and the best place of crossing from one kingdom to the other. The town is small, but its situation delightful, having a fine southern exposure, backed by a ridge of small hills. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of Lord Montgomery, whose residence was the old castle of Dunskey, which stands in the neighbourhood, on the brink of a tremendous precipice overhanging the sea, and was once a building of considerable strength, as appears from its interesting remains. The late Sir James Hunter Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and it is to the exertion of that gentleman that the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements.

STRANRAER,

WITH THE PARISHES OF INCH, KIRKCOLM, LESWALT, CAIRNRYAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STRANRAER (or Stranraer) is a thriving, respectable, and ancient town, a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery, as well as a parish, 81 miles S.W. from Glasgow, nearly ten miles W. from Glenelge, and rather more than eight from Portpatrick, eligibly situated at the inner extremity of Loch Ryan. The principal street is of great length, but the houses have not been erected on the most regular plan. In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained. It is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI., and is called the "Tower fortalice, and manor place of Chapel," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan. In the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth his wife, then Lady Auchterlloor. The lands of Auchterlloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair. Many new buildings have within the last few years been erected, of a very hand-some and substantial character. Among them may be mentioned the County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, and containing court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk, and police; the establishments of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited; the Clydesdale Bank, Limited; the British Linen Company, and the National Bank of Scotland, Limited. The prison is a handsome and substantial erection, possessing the requisite adaptation both for confinement and discipline. A reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855. The manufacture of netting, twine, and paper bags is carried on successfully in the institution, and besides the making up of clothing and shoes for the requirements of the inmates, many of them are employed in wood turning. The old Town Hall, in George street, is a neat structure. A justice of peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, a burgh court occasionally on Saturday, and the sheriff of the county holds a court weekly, and a small debt court fortnightly.

As a royal burgh, the town is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and fourteen councillors, and it joins with Whitburn, Wigtown, and New Galloway in parliamentary representation. The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, and the harbour is now large and commodious, consisting of west pier, east pier, and breakwork, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels. The east pier is connected with the railway by a harbour branch, by which cattle, goods and passengers are conveyed direct from the steamers. There is eighteen feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1100 tons burthen can discharge there. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow a fleet of men of war to ride at anchor with perfect safety. It was at CAIRNRYAN, the Prince of Wales first landed on Scottish soil.

The bay at one time afforded a splendid supply of fine oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to Sir William Wallace, of Loch Ryan, who annually lets it. This fishing at one time employed upwards of 100 fishermen for eight months in the year, and the quality of the oysters was so fine that the men could earn good wages, and pay for the privilege of fishing about £800 a year. The beds have latterly become impoverished, thus rendering the fishery unprofitable. There are, however, several kinds of white fish caught abundantly, and occasionally herrings are got equal in quality to the best obtained on any other part of the Scottish coast. The sea bathing is also excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. There is a coast-guard station here, and a custom house. Stranraer is peculiar in the absence of manufactories or works; but is noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The district is agricultural; grain, cheese, and all kinds of farm produce, and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and once a week by steamer. A steamer runs daily between Stranraer and Larne in connection with railways on either side.

Among other branches usually found in a flourishing town, there are in Stranraer a large brewery and five banking companies, branches of the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited; the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited. The principal inns are the King's Arms, Meikle's Hotel and the George. The Established church, in Church street, is a very handsome structure in the pointed style of architecture, the interior lofty and adorned with pinnacles. The interior is capacious, with galleries and a commanding pulpit, and the whole has an aspect of chaste neatness. The second church connected with the Establishment is situated at the western extremity of the town, on a lofty eminence, and with its tower, is a conspicuous landmark from the loch. There are other places of worship for various denominations, inclusive of two Free churches. The cemetery, beautifully situated above the town, commands a fine view of the loch; it is very tastefully laid out, and contains very handsome monuments. Numerous seats, adorned with all the charms of nature and art, ornament the neighbourhood of Stranraer. Loch Inch Castle, the residence of the Earl of Stair, is three miles distant, and Castle Kennedy in the vicinity, the property of the same nobleman, is surrounded by a delightfully picturesque scenery. The following, so far as the vicinity of the burgh, are also worthy of notice:—Locknaw Castle, the residence of Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart.; Gorsewall House, J. Carrick Moore, Esq.; Loch Ryan House, Sir William T. F. A. Wallace; Dansky House, Lieut. Colonel Gerard Smith; Logan, James McDowall, Esq.; Rephad, Thomas C. Greig, Esq.; Balgreggan, Mrs. Mathland. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs: for horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June, and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing from April and ending in November. Other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The population of Stranraer according to the census for 1871, was 5,977, and in 1881, 6,912.

The parish of INCH lies on the shore of Loch Ryan, extending nine miles in length by a breadth nearly as great. The parish church stands on the margin of a lake, in which there is a small beautifully wooded island. The lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which are the ruins of a castle, formerly a seat of the Earls of Stair. Acreage, 30,844. Population in 1871, 3,268, and in 1881, 2,254.

KIRKCOLM parish is bounded by Loch Ryan on the east, measuring a square of about five miles. The church is pleasantly situated near the shore of the lake, north of the bay called the Wig. Acreage, 13,318. Population in 1871, 1,948, and in 1881, 1,854.

The parish of LESWALT lies betwixt the Irish channel on the west, and Loch Ryan on the east. It is about the same size and of much the same form as Kirkcolm. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale, while from the sea the coast presents bold and rocky features. Acreage, 15,528. Population in 1871, 2,496, and in 1881, 1,354.

CAIRNRYAN is a small village on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan, six miles from Stranraer. The harbour affords safe anchorage for vessels which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lofty lighthouse for their guidance. Sir William T. F. A. Wallace has a residence here.

WHITHORN,

WITH THE ISLE OF WHITHORN AND PARISH OF GLASSERTON.

WHITHORN, or Whithorn, is a town of considerable antiquity and a royal burgh in the parish of Whithorn, 40 miles E. by S. from Portpatrick, 32 S.E. from Stranraer, 19 S. from Newton Stewart and 11 S. from Wigtown; situated not far distant from Wigtown bay. It was originally inhabited by a tribe of Britons called the Novantes, and was then a town of some consequence; it was mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia, the Saxons called it Hwitarn, and from the latter the appellation Whithorn is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in the fourth century, which Bede mentions as the first that was erected of stone. During the eighth century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the Episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the twelfth century. After the period of the Reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south, with diverging streets. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and joins with Stranraer and other burghs in returning one member to Parliament. Whithorn enjoys the facilities of railway communication by means of the Wigtonshire line. The local trade is very inconsiderable, and merely of a retail and domestic character. There are two banking establishments and several insurance agencies. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, and one each for United and Reformed Presbyterians. The parish church is remarkably neat as well as spacious, and much superior to most of the parish kirks in this county; it is erected partly on the venerable ruins of the priory, founded by St. Ninian before mentioned, and who is said to have been the first who converted the Picts to the Christian faith. These ruins are remarkably grand and imposing; they contain several large vaults, some beautiful Saxon and Gothic arches, and dilapidated sculptured armorial bearings of Scotland, the bishops of Galloway, and the Countess of Coullthart. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible Society, and there are Board schools in the town. A cattle market is held on the second Thursday in each month from April to December, and an annual fair in July. The acreage of the parish is 11,891; the population in 1871 was 2,906, and in 1881, 2,918, and of the town, 1,651.

The ISLE OF WHITHORN is a pleasant village, about three miles from Whithorn, of which it is the port. Near the village stand the remains of an old church, said to be the first built in this part of the kingdom, or, as some affirm, the first founded in Scotland, and its preservation is desirable from its venerable age and interesting origin. The village contains a Free church and Board schools. Population in 1871, 459, and in 1881, 353.

The parish of GLASSERTON lies on the east coast of Luce Bay, bounded by Whithorn on the east, Mochrum on the west, and Kirkcubbin on the north; it extends seven miles and a half in length by a general breadth of two and a half, except in its northern part, where it is nearly double that space. On the coast near its north-western confines is Lug Point, with a small haven on the north called Monreith Bay; a villa, at its head is termed the MILLTOWN OF MONREITH. The church and Board schools are in the southern quarter of the parish. Acreage, 13,284; population in 1871, 1,196, and in 1881, 1,208.

WIGTOWN,

AND THE PARISH OF KIRKINER AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIGTOWN (or Wigton)—the former mode of spelling is now generally adopted, to distinguish this town from that of Wigton in the county of Cumberland—is a royal and parliamentary burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish, 105 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 53 s.w. from Dumfries, 23 E. by s. from Stranraer, and 8 s. from Newton Stewart, pleasantly situated on an eminence near the north side of the Bladnoch water, two miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigton. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the middle ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of successful Saxon invaders, who conferred on it the name of Wig, from the place having been contested in a battle, the adjunct ton, or "town," was afterwards given when the town arose. The castle of Wigton subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous until the reign of David II., when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. The Wigtonshire Railway connects the town with the rest of Scotland and with England. The principal street is a parallelogram, of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants. At the end is a very handsome modern cross, of granite, sculptured in an elegant and tasteful manner. At the other extremity are the county buildings, having a tower of considerable height, which imparts a degree of dignity to the town. The building contains the court room, the sheriff's small debt court and the ordinary courts, which latter are held every Tuesday in time of session. A monument has been erected here in memory of Margaret Wilson and Margaret McLachlan, the martyrs who perished in the Bladnoch Water, in the year 1685. It is situated on the top of Windyhill, from which there is a magnificent view of the town and the surrounding country, and was erected by public subscription at a cost of £200. Many new buildings have been erected, some of them of a very tasteful and costly description, such as the new county buildings, the Board schools, the gaol and the banks; the latter are branches from the British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank, Limited. The principal inns are the Galloway Arms and the Commercial. The burgh altogether may be considered in an improving condition. The harbour of Wigton is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of three hundred tons burthen. Wigton is the seat of a custom house, comprehending the creeks of Wigtonshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. In the year 1681 Wigton was specified as one of the King's Free Burghs. It is, as a royal burgh, governed by a provost, two bailies, and eighteen councillors, and is associated with Stranraer, Whithorn and New Galloway in returning one member to the legislature. The present member is Sir John Charles D. Hay, of Craigenvooch.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, one for United Pre-byterians, and a chapel for Roman Catholics. The parish of Wigton extends five miles in length by four in breadth. It has several eminences throughout, but is in general flat and fertile. At the western extremity of the parish are nineteen large granite stones, placed in a circular form. They are supposed to have belonged to a druidical place of worship or sacrifice, while tradition points to the spot as the tomb of King Galdus. The market, entitled by charter, to be holden on Saturday, is now discontinued. Fairs are also chartered to be held at Candlemas on the first Monday in April and the first Fridays in July and August, all old style, but they are discontinued. A monthly cattle market on the fourth Friday of each month has been established, and there is an annual cattle show in July, which is numerously attended. The parish of Wigton contains 7,805 acres, and in 1871 the population was 2,706, and in 1881, 2,195, the town numbering 1,722.

The kirk town of KIRKINER is about three miles from Wigton, on the road to Garlieston, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery. The principal ornament in this neighbourhood is the stately mansion of R. Vans Agnew, Esq. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served as the foundation of the story of the "Bride of Lammermoor." The parish extends three miles along Wigton bay, the Bladnoch Water dividing it on the north from Wigton. An Established church and Board schools are in the village. The ruins of Longcastle church (the parish now incorporated with Kirkinner) stand at the southern extremity of the parish. Kirkinner is a station on the Wigtonshire railway. Acreage of the parish, 15,250. Population in 1871, 1,518, and in 1881, 1,596.

ISAAC SLATER respectfully informs Advertisers that he is always engaged in the Compilation of DIRECTORIES either of MANCHESTER and SALFORD, or of the various COUNTIES of ENGLAND and WALES, together with complete volumes of SCOTLAND and IRELAND.

—o—
THESE Works have been issued by ISAAC SLATER and the late firm of PIGOT & Co. (of which firm he is the only surviving partner) for nearly ninety years, and are therefore well known. The circulation of each volume is very large, much larger than that of other publications of the same character, circulating freely in London and the principal Towns in the Kingdom.

—o—
THE Advertisers have also an important advantage in a copious Classified Index of their various Trades, &c., which is inserted at the commencement of each work.

The SCOTTISH EQUITABLE is a Purely Mutual Office. There are no Shareholders to absorb any portion of the Profits, which are therefore wholly divided among the holders of Participating Policies.

It is provided by an article of the Deed of Constitution specially referred to in all Policies issued, that no Member of the Society shall incur any personal responsibility for claims under the Society's Policies.

POSITION OF THE SOCIETY.

At the CLOSE OF THE FIFTIETH YEAR, ON 1ST MARCH, 1881,

The Existing Assurances, including Bonus Additions, amounted to£8,443,680

The INCOME of the year was—

Premiums	£220,661
Interest and Dividends	103,206
Sundry Profits, &c.	1,072

324,939

The Assurance Fund was£2,489,481

At the General Meeting of the Society on the 24th June, 1878, the Profit realized in the previous Five Years was reported as £234,637. New Bonus additions, amounting to £376,700, were made to the Policies, being at the rate of £1. 2s. 6d. per cent per annum on the sum assured and previous Bonuses, or equivalent to an average addition, calculated simply upon the original sum assured, at the rate of £1. 6s. 7d. per cent for each year the policy had been in force since the last Investigation. Policies issued in the first three years of the Society are now more than doubled in amount. The Directors are of opinion that the Members may confidently look forward to a further increase in the rate of Bonus at the next Division of Profits in 1883.

NON-FORFEITABLE POLICIES are now granted by the Society on a new and improved plan, which combines the advantages of MODERATE PREMIUMS payable for a LIMITED NUMBER OF YEARS (11, 22, or 33) ULTIMATE PARTICIPATION IN THE PROFITS, FIXED SURRENDER VALUES, and the issue of FULLY PAID-UP POLICIES without special application to the Directors, thus including all the real advantages that Life Assurance admits of. This plan is peculiarly suitable in the case of Settlement Policies.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES with special advantages are granted under the "Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880"; free from all claims of creditors in the event of subsequent insolvency.

By Resolutions recently passed, the conditions as to Foreign Residence and Travel have been made MUCH MORE LIBERAL, and at the same time GREATLY SIMPLIFIED.

THE POLICIES (with few exceptions), become, after five years, Indisputable, Whole World, and free from all conditions except payment of the ordinary premium; age having been proved. It is the constant aim of the Directors to introduce every improvement in the practice of Life Insurance that is likely to be beneficial to the general body of Members.

LOANS are granted in connection with Life Insurance, on Life Interest, Reversions, and other approved Security. The Directors are also prepared to entertain proposals for the sale of Reversions to the Society.

THE ANNUAL REPORT, containing particulars of the Investments and the Balance Sheet, Forms of Proposal, and all information, may be obtained on application at the Head Office, or any of the Society's Branch Offices or Agencies.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The Quinquennial Valuation to 31st December, 1879, was made on the basis of the Institute of Actuaries' (Hx) Table of Mortality and 3 per cent. interest. The Valuation was strictly a net premium one, the whole of the loading being reserved.

The Valuation Balance Sheet showed a surplus of £143,194. 6s. 6d. in the Life Assurance Fund, and of this sum it was decided to divide £140,000, leaving £3,194. 6s. 6d. of undivided profit to be carried forward to the new Quinquennium. According to the regulations of the Company, the sum to be divided was appropriated as follows:—

Four-fifths to the Policyholders : : : : : £112,000
One-fifth to the Proprietors : : : : : 28,000
£140,000

A large proportion (upwards of one-fourth) of the Company's business is non-participating, and the sum of £112,000 was therefore divisible as a bonus among 3,222 policies, assuring with existing bonuses £2,939,985. 16s. 6d., the annual premiums payable under which amount to £83,261. 17s. 2d. The proprietors' one-fifth share, amounting to £28,000, was the sole benefit for the past five years which they received from the Life Business in return for the guarantee afforded by the unusually large paid-up capital of the Company.

IN THE FIRE DEPARTMENT Security of the highest order is afforded; the Funds, exclusive of Capital, being equal to 2½ years' Premium Income.

IN THE LIFE DEPARTMENT exceptional Security is also afforded; the Reserves being considerably greater than the amount required according to the very stringent test of a valuation at 3 per cent. interest by the Institute of Actuaries' H_M Table.

FORFEITING OF LIFE POLICIES PREVENTED.

By this Company's Non-Forfeitable System it is provided that so long as the Surrender Value of the Policy is sufficient to meet any overdue Premiums and Interest thereon at 5 per cent. the Policy shall not lapse. One of the chief advantages of the System is that it is self-acting, no notice by the Policyholder being necessary, the non-payment of the Premium being sufficient to set it in operation. It effectually prevents the forfeiture of a valuable Policy, and it does away with Fines and Medical Certificates, which are required under the ordinary rules.

LOWEST PREMIUMS FOR LIFE ASSURANCE.

In Classes A 1½, A 2, and B the Insured, while sharing in Profits, pay very low Premiums.

Head Master - - ANDREW M'LELLAN, M.A. (Edin.)

(For eight years senior English Master in the Collegiate School, and in Watson's College School, Edinburgh.)

PUPILS are prepared for Business, for the University, and for special work. There is an AGRICULTURAL CLASS during the winter term. The Class-Rooms have accommodation for fifty pupils, and the Boarding Department for twenty boys. One of the resident masters is a native of Germany. The senior assistant is an Aberdeen graduate.

VOCAL MUSIC, Drawing, Shorthand, Fencing, Piano, have special masters.

The DOMESTIC ARRANGEMENTS are under the superintendence of Mrs. M'LELLAN, and specially aim at home comfort.

Terms from FIFTY to EIGHTY GUINEAS, inclusive of Extras.

The GROUNDS extend to five acres, and command an extensive view. The Gravel soil, and mild climate are suited to boys from the Colonies, and to those who are delicate.

Dr. BRYCE, of the Edinburgh Collegiate School, says:—"I found Mr. M'LELLAN a most valuable master. He subordinated everything to duty. He was respected by the boys for his talents and his skill in teaching, and was loved by them for his interest in their progress. As a scholar in his own department he has few superiors, while he is, at the same time, a good classic and a high mathematician."

Dr. OGILVIE, of Watson's College, says:—"It must be gratifying for you to know that no department of the school has been more favourably reported on year by year by the various examiners than the English Department, which you have brought to a state of efficiency difficult to maintain. I have no doubt you have been partly led to undertake the management of a larger Boarding Establishment by the admirable manner in which Mrs. M'LELLAN has succeeded in securing the domestic comfort of the boys under your charge."

PROFESSOR BAIN, of Aberdeen, says of Mr. M'LELLAN's pupils:—"The appearance made by the pupils could have been made only under a thoroughly efficient teacher."

Mr. PATERSON, the Edinburgh University Examiner, says:—"I have nothing to add to what I said in my report two years ago of the intellectual life and activity which evidently pervaded all the classes under Mr. M'LELLAN's charge."

SWINBURN'S

The superiority of these Stains over every preparation of the kind for Staining Deal, Pine, &c., has been long established by the marked preference shown for them by Architects and others interested in the decorations to which they are applicable.

AMONG THEIR PECULIAR QUALITIES ARE THE FOLLOWING—

They are Transparent; Stains mixed by Painters are Opaque, consisting of insoluble matter, and as a natural consequence obscure the Grain and feathery appearance of the Woods instead of bringing them out with effect, as Swinburn's Stains are found to do.

Their Fluidity and freedom from Sediment renders cracking and peeling from the surface impossible.

TRANSPARENT STAINS

By using Swinburn's Stains the cost and process of Graining is dispensed with, as well as Four Coats of Paint, necessary previously to Graining. They dry quickly. Their application is most easy. They require less labour to apply them and cover more surface and produce a better effect than any other stains in the market.

They are preventive against dry rot.

These Stains have been in use for Twenty-five Years.

Swinburn's Stains are manufactured in 9 colours, viz.:—Extra Deep and Deep Oak, Middle or Wainscot, Pale Wainscot, Satinwood, Mahogany, Rosewood and Walnut, also a Black Satin. These Stains being thus arranged, are available for Ecclesiastical and other Buildings.

Each of these Stains is made to a given strength, and it is presumed they will be found to be all that can be desired for staining purposes; nevertheless, they may be diluted with water (only). Spirits of wine or turpentine must not be used to dilute these Stains. This of itself is a great item of expense saved.

THEY ARE MANUFACTURED AND SOLD BY

F. SWINBURN, 12 SOUTHWARK BRIDGE ROAD, LONDON, S.E.,

Metalined Bushes

*FOR LOOSE PULLIES, UPRIGHT SHAFTS, ELEVATORS,

(DR. STUART GWYNN'S PATENT.)

WE would beg to recommend to the notice of the public in general the above Bushes, which are self-lubricating and require no oil or attention whatever. We have had them running for years in this country and on the Continent with great success, and still they show no sign of wear, but give new proof of their utility and satisfaction. For Loose Pullies, Ship and Gin Blocks, they have been found specially invaluable; and the many good reports from practical men testify them to be a clean and economical substitute for oiled Bushes. A large stock is always kept on hand, and we would be glad to supply any parties interested with a few Bushes on approval on receiving exact sizes. We are also prepared to supply "Metaline" Engine Packing, which has been tried and found to suit better than any other article in the market. It is cheaper in its first application, and will last longer; but the great benefit derived from our packing is, it requires no oil or other lubricant. The machinery in our own works, 132 Murraygate, can be seen at any time. No oil has been used for lubricating purposes since they first started, now upwards of seven years ago.

THE M.P. LETTER BINDER.

CAUTION.
OUR TRADE MARK,
"M.P."
IS UPON ALL
COVERS & BINDERS
OF OUR MANUFACTURE.

*We can now make
M.P. Binders any Special Size.*

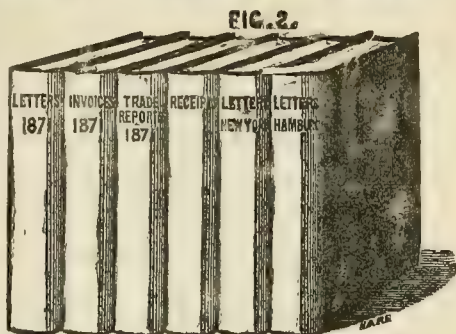

FIG. 2.

THIS NEW PATENT BINDER has been supplied to many of the principal Firms throughout the World, and is calculated to effect a complete revolution in the manner of stowing away letters. It has already, to a large extent, displaced the "Skeleton Book" system, the "Docqueting" system, and the "Pigeon Hole" system, it being considered simpler to work and safer for reference—while the cost is 1/6 for a Volume two inches thick.

By their adoption any Letter or Document can, at a moment's notice, be referred to as it was originally received, without the usual annoyance of searching dusty bundles, and the great loss of valuable time, and very often of the mislaid document itself, which in many instances never is replaced.

By their adoption any Letter or Document can be referred to with the same ease and facility as your outgoing Letters can in the Letter Book.

By their adoption you have then your incoming and your outgoing Letters both alike, bound in volumes, paged and indexed. The BINDER itself lasts permanently, loose covers only being required on its becoming filled with Documents. The plan of working is very simple: the spring-bar is pulled back to the catch, where it remains till the Document is placed in front of the needles, the catch is then pressed forward, and the spring-bar carries the Letter home.

When the machine has filled the needles to the very point—with six, eight, or ten hundred Letters,—the discharge of the volume from the machine, and the binding of it, are done in a twinkling. Rest the spring-bar upon the catch, take out the two screws with which the volume is fixed to the machine, and then pin the needle heads with the tube and wire. The Book is then complete; label it on the back, stow it away, and apply to us for another pair of covers, an index, set of needles, tube and wire, with two screws with which to fix the lot to the machine; this done, go on as before.

Fig. 1 represents the BINDER complete, ready to receive documents.

Fig. 2 represents the VOLUMES of LETTERS which have been made up by the machine.

Price for No. 1.—Quarto, 10/6; Covers, separately, 1/6. Foolscap, 15/-; Covers, 2/- Other sizes in proportion. The various parts of this Machine are so made as to suit each other exactly. Its popularity is increasing every day.

TO BE HAD ONLY FROM THE MAKER.

THE PATENT LETTER BINDER.

Fig. 1.

ADAM SIMMERS, Ironmonger and Machine Merchant,

Fig. 1 Represents the Patent Letter Binder complete and ready for use.

NOTE.—The large demand for these Binders and Covers enables me to buy DIRECT in large quantities; I am therefore in a position to supply them at a good reduction from List Price.

NEW SIGHT FEED LUBRICATOR, For all kinds of Engine Cylinders.

A, Inlet valve. B, Outlet valve. C, Regulating valve. D, Plug, through which to refill cup. E, Waste valve to draw off the water.

THE OIL, forced from the reservoir, passes down through a tube inside the reservoir, to the bottom of the gauge-glass, and is there discharged into the water with which the glass is filled, and can be seen as it passes to the cylinder, rising drop by drop through the water. The quantity of Oil being used is thus seen at a glance, and the feed regulated.

HOW WORKED.—Fill the glass tube indicator with clean water, also a little in the cup; fill the cup full of oil, and screw down the plug D, open valve A and B, then regulating valve.

Engineers and others who follow these directions can have little or no trouble in the working of the Lubricator.

Teaninich Distillery, Alness, Ross-shire.

THE Whisky made in this Distillery is produced from the finest barley grown in the neighbourhood, which is one of the best barley-growing districts in Scotland. The water supply rises in the mossy uplands of the county, where peat of the best quality is got for kiln-drying the malt. The chief requisites for the production of the finest quality of Highland Malt Whisky are thus at command here, and the business has in consequence been carried on extensively, without interruption, since the beginning of the century.

Best facilities afforded to Wine Merchants who mature Whisky in their own sherry wood. Orders may be given to the Agents for the Distillery in the large towns in England and Scotland, or sent direct to

USED IN HER MAJESTY'S LAUNDRY. THE FINEST, PUREST, AND BEST BLUE YET MADE.

JOHN JOHNSON & CO.

Have the greatest confidence in recommending the Royal Palace Blue, not only for its magnificent colour, but for its permanency, which, owing to a secret chemical property, their make alone possesses, Linens, Laces, and other Fabrics rinsed in a solution of the ROYAL PALACE BLUE will retain their intense whiteness for at least six months longer than those which have been rinsed with any other Square Blues, or, indeed, with any other Laundry Blue whatever.

TESTIMONIAL FROM HER MAJESTY'S LAUNDRESS.

To Messrs. John Johnson & Co. Liverpool.

GENTLEMEN,—I am, and have been for several years, Head Laundress to Her Majesty the Queen. In all my experience of the various Blues prepared for Laundry purposes, I have never found one which answers so well, or produces so pure a snowy whiteness, as your LAUNDRY BLUE in squares.

PATENT FLUID, OR, NON-POISONOUS SHEEP DIP, AND SPECIFIC FOR SCAB.

LITTLE'S CHEMICAL FLUID is now the most perfect Sheep Dip. It is immediately fatal to Ticks, Red Lice, and an UNFAILING REMEDY FOR SCAB; at the same time it is quite harmless to the sheep or any other animal, nourishes the wool and greatly improves its quality. The Mixed Dip may be swallowed with impunity by man or beast, forms an excellent remedy for all intestinal worms, and is a splendid healer of all wounds, sores, and bruises. The preparation of the Dip is MOST EASY; by simply pouring COLD WATER upon the concentrated black fluid, an instantaneous mixture takes place, and a MILK-WHITE WASH is the result. After the Sheep are once dipped, rain will not wash the Dip off the Fleece. The Fluid is HIGHLY CONCENTRATED AND CHEAP. One gallon (at 7s. 6d.) will make 100 GALLONS of Dip, sufficient for 100 Sheep.

SOME OF THE USES OF THE CHEMICAL FLUID.

FOR SHEEP.—Ordinary dipping for Ticks and Lice (1 part Fluid to 100 parts water). RED LICE (1 in 70), two dippings at 8 days interval. SCAB (1 in 25 to 1 in 50), two dippings. Foot Rot—Let sheep stand in shallow bath (1 in 25). For Bottling or Pouring (use 1 in 50). WORM IN THE THROAT in Lambs (1 in 50).

FOR CATTLE.—Destroys all Vermin infesting the Skin (1 in 10); cures Ringworm and Scurf (1 in 50 or stronger); heals all Wounds, Sore Udders, &c. (1 in 100). Disinfectant for Foot and Mouth Disease and Rinderpest (1 in 100), and Medicine for Tapeworm in Calves.

FOR HORSES.—Cures Mange, Canker, Grease, Thrushes, Cracked Heels, Saddle-galls, all kinds of Sores (1 in 10 to 1 in 50), prevents and cures Lung Disease; for Lice on the Skin (1 in 10); Medicine for "Bots" (1 in 50).

FOR DOGS.—Kills Fleas, cures Mange, Red Mange, Herpes, Eczema.

PATENT KEYED DOOR FURNITURE.—The knob being fastened to the spindle by a strong dove-tailed key, this furniture is more secure and less liable to get out of order than any other variety.

“ WEDGE CASEMENT-STAY.—Being made of Wrought Iron, covered with brass, or of Wrought Iron alone, is sufficiently strong to resist strains under which stays of the ordinary make so frequently bend or break. The fastening, a combination of the screw and wedge, is simple and secure.

“ SASH-OPENER AND AUTOMATIC FASTENER.—Affords Ventilation with security when the window is open at the top or bottom. The act of closing the window fastens the sash. It is particularly suited for heavy plate glass or high sashes.

“ BOOK SHELF FITTINGS.—Economical of space and extremely easy of adjustment.

“ HOPKINSON'S GUARDED LEVER SASH-FASTENER.—Cannot be opened by an instrument from the outside.

“ HOOHAM'S STEEL RIBBON SASH-LINE.—Formed of several bands of watch-spring steel, covered with a binding of copper wire, and so prepared as to resist corrosion, supplies a want long felt of a material for hanging safely all kinds of—but more especially heavy—sashes.

“ HOOHAM'S STEEL PIANO-WIRE PICTURE-LINE.—The core of this line is made of the same wire as is used in the best pianos; it will, therefore, support an intense strain for an indefinite time.

“ WETHERED'S BLIND FURNITURE is the simplest and best. It fastens automatically.

“ CURRALL'S VENTILATORS secure a regular supply of fresh air, without draught, at a very small cost.

“ SAFETY DOOR CHAIN AND BOLT.

HAYWARD'S SECURE FLUSH BOLT.

ALLEN'S UNIVERSAL HAT HOLDER.

THE EWART HIGH SCHOOL, NEAR NEWTON-STEWART,

Has been founded to enable the Upper and Middle Classes to obtain for their Sons the advantages of a Classical and Mathematical or Commercial Education of the First Class, at a moderate expense, the whole amount of the Endowment being saved to parents in Fees.

Head Master—JOHN ST. CLAIR, University of Edinburgh, F.R.G.S.

(Formerly Privy Council Lecturer in Literature in the Church of Scotland Training College, Edinburgh), assisted by a thoroughly Efficient Staff of Experienced Graduates.

The course of Instruction is such as to prepare for the Universities, the Examinations for the Public Service, or the pursuits of General Business; and the organization of the School provides that each Pupil shall receive special instruction and superintendence every hour of the day, and have the whole of his work examined by the Principal. In proportion to the number of Teachers, the number of Pupils is so much limited, that special attention can be given to each.

Besides the Sons of Gentlemen residing in and near Newton-Stewart, the High School is attended chiefly by the Sons of the Landed Proprietors, the Clergy, and other educated classes in the South of Scotland, as well as more distant quarters. The attendance of young gentlemen is at its maximum now; and three-fourths of those now resident in the Institute are younger brothers or other relatives of former Pupils.

In the Upper Department of the School, Written Examinations are held very frequently, and the written papers are transmitted to the Parents of the Pupils. In this Department preparation is now made for the Examinations for the Arts, Law, and Medical Classes, and for the many Civil Service appointments lately thrown open to Competition. Previous to the adoption of this general course of instruction, the whole body of the Pupils took the similar course of study prescribed for the Local Examinations of the Universities, and over NINE-TENTHS of them actually passed these Examinations, a proportion not approached by any other School in England or Scotland.

TERMS MODERATE AND INCLUSIVE.

Pupils may be enrolled at any time when there is a vacancy, and these vacancies occur mostly in July and August. Vacancies may be pre-engaged.

FIGURES AND FOUNTAINS.

For upwards of half a century the Garnkirk Fire Clay has been known throughout the world, and the supply of it is still inexhaustible. This Clay differs from that from which other Scotch Fire Clay wares are made, in being comparatively free from iron, the presence of which in quantity is not only dangerous but wasteful, as owing to its power as a conductor, it causes great radiation of heat.

The Garnkirk Fire Clay differs from these other Scotch Clays also in the extra cost of its manufacture, requiring as it does for burning, a degree of heat which changes these clays into a black vitreous mass.

The Garnkirk Company have been favoured with the results of a series of comparative trials which had been made by large English consumers, in which the best brands of Fire Bricks of the United Kingdom were tested against the Garnkirk Bricks. In each and all of these trials, the Garnkirk Brick proved the most refractory, and even the highly prized Stourbridge Bricks yielded in each trial to the force of heat applied with five times the rapidity of the Garnkirk Bricks.

The Garnkirk Fire Clay Company manufacture specially for Glass Works where the clay is required to withstand the action of molten glass, and also for other works where the combining power of alkalis has to be withstood.

The GARNKIRK FIRE CLAY COMPANY confidently recommend their Fire Clay Ware as being the best to be had.

Portable Steam Cranes.

THE Illustration represents our Ordinary Portable Steam Crane, fitted on wrought iron carriage, with wheels suited for rail or roadway; but they can be adapted to propel themselves by the Steam power, or provided with prolonged pillar and enlarged sole-plate for fixing into Wharf for Stationary purposes. Each Crane has a pair of Cylinders, reversing motions, and foot brake; and gearing to hoist or lower and turn entirely round by the Steam power, separately or simultaneously, as required.

Usual sizes, 1 to 20 Tons.

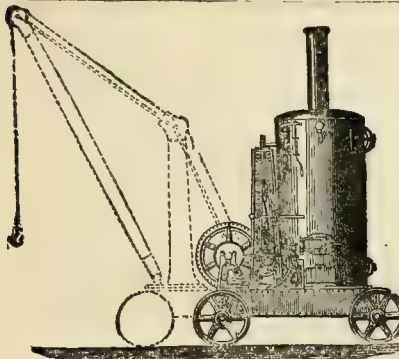

These Cranes were selected by H. M. Commissioners to receive and send away the Heavy Machinery in the LONDON INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITIONS, 1862, 1871, and 1872.

Contractors' Locomotives.

THESE are intended and specially designed for working at Railway Sidings, Quarries, Collieries, Iron Ore Mines, and for Shunting generally, as well as for Contractors' purposes in constructing Railways, Docks, Harbours, &c. They are strongly geared to draw very heavy loads in proportion to their nominal horse power, and will work on RAILS or TRAMWAYS of a gauge from about 2½ feet upwards. Each Engine is complete with a pair of cylinders, link motion for reversing, force feed-pump, steam regulator, spring balance safety valve, water tank, coal box, &c. The Boiler is of our Patent Vertical hanging-tube class.

Usual sizes, 9, 12, and 15 horse power.

Portable Hoisting Engines.

THE Illustration represents, in black lines, our ordinary Hoist, and in dotted lines the same Engine, with the addition of a Pillar and Swinging Jib, suitable for general hoisting work, pile driving, and working other Machinery. If required to be moved frequently, the front wheels of carriage can be made to swivel, and horse shafts provided; or the Engines may be adapted to propel themselves by the steam power.

2 to 10 horse power are the sizes usually kept in stock.

FOR DISCHARGING COKE OVENS

A somewhat similar arrangement of Engine is found very serviceable, the winding as well as the propelling motion being then (for this heavier work) actuated by worm and worm-wheel gearing, so as to give greater power at a reduced speed.

In the "ENGINEER" of 25th February, 1881, will be found an Illustration and description of a special COKE-DRAWING ENGINE, several of which we have supplied to the BLAENAVON COMPANY.

Chaplins' Patent Improved Steam Excavator or "Navy."
Steam and Hand Derrick and Overhead Travelling Cranes.
Stationary Engines and Boilers. Steam Road Rollers.

Pumping & Winding Engines,

for Winding or Pumping, either separately or simultaneously, as illustrated, are very similar in arrangement to the Hoists just described, but they are generally fitted with large Drums, suitable for heavy hauling or hoisting purposes; and in some cases have been fitted with two or more drums.

They are supplied either on Sole-plate, as shewn, or made Portable on Truck, Carriage, and Wheels.

Usual sizes from 2 to 26 horse power.

Ships' Deck Hoists and Sea Water Distilling Apparatus.
Engines and Boilers for Light Screw and Paddle Steamers.
Steam Cargo Barges, Steam Launches, and Yachts.

ORR'S HEALTH RESTORER TO BE HAD.

THERE IS NO HUMBUG HERE.

IT is composed of Distilled Herbs; and has not the Great Creator of all things planted the Herbs to heal the diseased bodies of the fallen sons of men? and why should men and women give away their money for that which does them no good, but many times harm? Merchants, Shippers, Farmers & Domestic Use.

PATENTED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

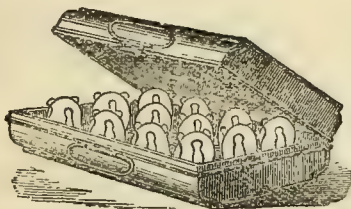

5 DOZEN SINGLE TRAY.

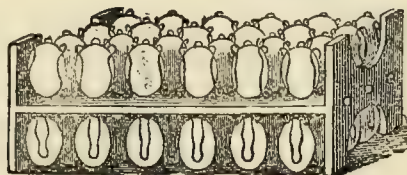

20 DOZEN CRATE.

EGG BOILERS.

1 DOZEN DOMESTIC BOX.

REVERSIBLE TRAY.

The above illustrations show several forms of this important invention which provides an Economical and Permanent System of Packing, Carrying, and Storing Eggs in wire springs, thus dispensing with the use of straw.

The eggs are simply pushed into springs which hold them securely, preventing breakage, dirt, and contamination of any kind.

Counting is dispensed with, as the Ovifers contain a known quantity and have the eggs placed in rows.

It is well known that Eggs packed in straw or similar material lose much in quality and value; the Ovifers save this serious loss, and at the same time provide for the eggs being packed on end, in which position they will keep much longer than in any other; especially if turned over daily. The Ovifers are made to hold from 1 to 30 dozen eggs; they are very durable, and quickly repay the first outlay, by the great saving effected.

The Egg Boilers are made to boil from 3 to 18 eggs at a time. When filled they are placed into the water and can be afterwards used at table. The larger sizes will be found invaluable for Ship's use.

Houses, Infirmaries, Hospitals, Schools,
OR ANY KIND OF BUILDINGS,

THOROUGHLY & WARMED BY THE PATENT MANCHESTER GRATES OR STOVES.

By their use in ground floor rooms of houses, fires in Bedrooms are not required. Thousands in use in Great Britain, Ireland, and the Continent.

To Illustrate the difference in the Warming and Ventilating Powers of Warm Air Grates, please read the following:—

UNSATISFACTORY WARMING

Of the new Manchester Workhouse, Manchester, which is not warmed by means of the Manchester Grates:—

Dr. Muir, H.M. Inspector of the Local Government, in his report of the above, says that the warming of the wards is very defective, as shown in the very heavy mortality from lung disease, no fewer than 820 out of 789 deaths having been due to bronchitis, consumption, and inflammation of the lungs. Additional means of warming was very urgently needed.—(Vide the Manchester Guardian, August 26, 1881.)

UNSATISFACTORY WARMING

Of the new Knightsbridge Barracks, where other than the Manchester Grates are used:—

Lieutenant-General Prendergast, H.M.S., says that it is impossible for these barracks to be warmed by means of the Grates now in use there, and that the soldiers shiver in their beds under their blankets.—(Vide the Building News.)

TO CONVINCE THE MOST PREJUDICED THAT WARMING BY AIR IS THE BEST METHOD, PLEASE READ THE FOLLOWING:—

In forty Government Schools in SAXONY observations have lately been made as to the temperature, carbonic acid, and moisture of the air, with different kinds of heating—hot water, air, and stove. It is proved that air heating gives the best results—the least variation of temperature, much the least proportion of carbonic acid (as measured in the middle of the room, at the height of a table), and the smallest variation of the moisture. The ventilation in both the other systems was unsatisfactory.

SATISFACTORY WARMING

Of the Oldham Workhouse Infirmary, near Manchester, by means of the Manchester Grates:—

Dr. Patterson, M.D., says that there are 82 of the Manchester Grates (now at the present date increased to upwards of 80) in the above Infirmary, giving to everyone concerned the utmost satisfaction; that the wards are warm all over, and absolutely free from cold draughts; that there are several wards of the following dimensions: 84 feet X 24 feet X 12 feet high, with four of the Manchester Grates in each ward, and that with the lowest fires he has never seen the temperature below 60° Fahr., and that to-day, with moderate fires, the temperature of wards was standing at 70° Fahr. at the most distant point from any Grate; and in the late severe frost, when coles were used in the Manchester Grates, the temperature got up to 75° Fahr., at which point it became necessary to discontinue two of the fires.—Vide The Field, December 20, 1879.)

SATISFACTORY WARMING

Of a Mansion by means of the Manchester Grates:—

Major German, H.M.S., writing from Sevenoaks, Kent, says:—'I have tried every new grate, and have no hesitation in saying that the Manchester Grate is decidedly the best. The warm air supply to the rooms above that in which the Manchester Grates are fixed is abundant, of a good temperature, and above all, singularly sweet and free from smell. You are at liberty to use this in any way that you may think it may be of use to you.'

In addition to the many thousands of the Patent Manchester Grates in use in the United Kingdom, Ireland, and on the Continent, 80 are now being fixed at the Salford Hospitals, Manchester.

Illustrated Sheets and Hundreds of Testimonials on application. One just to hand says that for the Warming of a Bedroom by the Warm Air generated by means of the Manchester Grate fixed in his Dining Room, on ground floor, that it is far superior to anything he had seen in his travels either in Europe or America, and thinks it matter of regret that they are not used in every house.

In use in Palaces, Jails, Churches, Billiard Rooms, Banks, Workhouses, Mansions, Cottages, The Royal Observatory, and Asylums.

LATEST SPECIALITY—

THE STAR HEATING STOVE

PATENT NO. 4787. 1881.

This is essentially a Fire-Brick Stove. Internally it is composed of the Glenboig Star Fire Bricks, and externally of Iron, or Iron set with ornamental and artistic Tiles. The metal is used only for strength and ornamentation. The heat absorbing and gentle radiating qualities of Fire-Clay are taken advantage of, in varying degrees, in most good Heating Stoves; but in this they are utilised in the highest possible degree, and the result is a Stove giving forth warm air, sweet and fresh, very different from the air heated by an Iron Stove, and with an expenditure of fuel which will compare favourably with any Stove in use. It burns any description of for smoke consumption will be found to be of the most perfect description. The aim of the designer has been,—First, Efficiency; Second, Economy; Third, Simplicity. To those who understand the Stove question, the full importance of these terms, and the order in which they are used, will be understood.

As regards efficiency, the No. 1 Stove (the size exhibited) will maintain a temperature of from 60 deg. to 65 deg. for twenty-four hours in a room 20ft. by 15ft. by 12ft., with a consumption of from 14 lbs. to 28 lbs. of Coal, according as the firing is managed or may be desired. Its economy will be apparent when we state that for a room of the dimensions given, the cost is as under:

FOR TWENTY-FOUR HOURS, FIRING.

Coal at 7s. 6d. per Ton	over ¾d. to 1¼d.
" 15s. "	" 1d. to 2¼d.
" 22s. 6d. "	" 1¼d. to 3¾d.

In most open fires and stoves the heat goes principally up the chimney; that this is not the case with the Star Heating Stove is proved by the fact that when working with the proper draught, the bricks around the fire are too hot to be touched, while the thin iron pipe leading to the chimney is just comfortably warm.

The Makers, who have had much experience in this branch of business, consider that the Star Heating Stove meets every want expressed in the past in regard to heating Stoves.

It is simple in its construction, and also in its working. The fire-bricks are of such a kind, and are used in such a way, that cracking from change of temperature is impossible; and in operation it will be found that while cleaning can be easily done, it will almost never be required.

The Stove may be fitted with a damper, but it is preferred without, as in careless hands, the products of combustion, when burning coke or anthracite, might be permitted to escape into the house. The mode of cutting off the air at the front by closing ashpan and doors, thus admitting only what passes through the chimneys, is preferable. This makes the fire-place a "gas producer," forming carbonic oxide, which is burned by the air from the heating chamber.

It heats up quickly, having no cold iron to contend with, and maintains a steady temperature, giving forth heat for hours after firing has ceased. In first cost it is cheaper than any other Stove in use having anything like an equal appearance. It is made in three sizes, the one shown in illustration is the largest.

EXTRACTS FROM EXAMINERS' REPORTS—1881.

'I sincerely congratulate the Trustees on the present condition and future prospects of the School. With everything attractive in the locality in which it is situated, there is combined all that could be desired as regards scholarship and teaching ability on the part of the masters; and I cannot doubt that parents and guardians will show themselves more and more sensible of the high educational advantages which are thus presented to them in connection with Morison's Academy.'—ALEX. ROBERTS, D.D., Professor of Humanity, St. Andrews.

'The style in which most of the papers are executed is of a very high order of merit. . . . In no school I have examined this year have I found the results so highly satisfactory in Algebra, etc. . . . In conclusion, I may be permitted again to express my general satisfaction with the work done in this department, which encourages me to entertain the confident hope that the prestige of the School, as far as Mathematics is concerned, will be fully maintained under its new head.'—PROFESSOR BIDWELL, St. Andrews.

TESTIMONIALS.

From Messrs. EASTONS & ANDERSON, Erith Iron Works, Erith, Kent.—“The Gauge Glasses you sent us were $\frac{3}{8}$ inch diam., and about $\frac{1}{4}$ inch bore, and stood from 2,400 to 3,900 lbs. per square inch bursting pressure. We want them stronger than this. If you think $\frac{1}{2}$ inch outside diam. and $\frac{1}{4}$ inch bore is likely to stand a higher pressure, please send us a dozen such glasses, say 14 or 18 inches long, as you prefer.”

From Messrs. JOHN FOWLER & Co., Steam Plough and Locomotive Works, Leeds.—“We have always found the quality of your Gauge Glasses to be very good.”

From Messrs. GOURLAY BROTHERS & Co., Engineers and Shipbuilders, Dundee.—“We have used your Gauge Glasses, both for Marine and Land Boilers, for a considerable number of years past, and they have always given us satisfaction.”

From Messrs. MERRYWEATHER & Sons, Steam Fire Engine Works, London.—“We have used your Gauge Glasses for the last ten years, and have much pleasure in testifying as to their durability.”

From Messrs. JOHN BROWN & Co. (LIMITED), Atlas Steel and Iron Works, Sheffield.—“We have now used your Eureka Gauge Glasses for over eight years, and they give us every satisfaction.”

We beg to call your attention to our “Eureka” Gauge Glasses, which are unequalled for Durability, having been tested up to 3900 lbs. pressure to the square inch. They are made perfectly parallel, and will bear any variation of temperature. They will not change colour.

The Rev. Neville Jones, M.A., St. George's Church, Bolton,

Says:—"I have great pleasure in stating that the Apparatus for warming St. George's Church, put up by Mr. Whitaker five years ago, has given entire satisfaction. A variety of opinions was expressed by my people whether the Church should be warmed by Hot Water Pipes or Hot Air; I am, however, very thankful, by the advice of Mr. Whitaker, we adopted the latter, and I do not think there has been a single complaint since it has been in operation; indeed, I cannot speak too highly of it. We can warm the Church thoroughly the coldest day in winter to any temperature we please. The Church is very large, seating nearly 2,000 people.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES,

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhœa, Spasms, Colic, and Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a Dose of CHLORODYNE.

Trade Mark.

CHILORODYNE is a liquid, taken in drops. It invariably relieves pain of whatever kind; creates a calm, refreshing sleep; allays irritation of the nervous system when all other remedies fail; leaving no bad effects like opium or laudanum; and can be taken when no other medicine can be tolerated. Its value in saving life in infancy is not easily estimated,—a few drops will subdue the irritation of teething, prevent and arrest Convulsions, cure Whooping Cough, Spasms, and Flatus at once.

Among invalids, it allays the pain of Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, &c. It soothes the weary aching of Consumption, relieves the soreness of the Chest, Cough, and Expectoration, and cures all Chest Affections, such as Asthma, Bronchitis, Palpitations, &c. It checks Diarrhœa, Alvine Discharges, or Spasms; and Colics of the Intestines, &c.

The extensive demand for this remedy, known as Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, by the Medical Profession, Hospitals, Dispensaries—Civil, Military, and Naval—and Families, especially guarantees that this statement of its extreme importance and value is a bond fide one, and worthy of the attention of all.

CAUTION.—Always ask for “Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne,” and beware of spurious compounds or imitations. Dr. Browne placed the Recipe for making “Chlorodyne” in the hands of Mr. Davenport ONLY; consequently there can be no other Manufacturer. The genuine bears the words, “Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne” on the Government Stamp of each bottle.

The following is an extract from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor in the late Chlorodyne Chancery suit—BROWNE & DAVENPORT v. FREEMAN:—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of Chlorodyne, that the statements of the defendant Freeman were deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say that they had been sworn to. Eminent hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See THE TIMES, July 13th, 1864.

J. T. DAVENPORT,

33, GREAT RUSSELL STREET, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON.

[SEE OVER,

TESTIMONIALS.

Earl Russell has graciously favoured J. T. Davenport with the following:—"Extract of a despatch from Mr. Webb, H. B. M.'s Consul at Manilla, dated Sept. 17, 1864:—

"The remedy most efficacious in its effects (in Epidemic Cholera) has been found to be CHLORODYNE, and with a small quantity given to me by Dr. Burke I have saved several lives."

"* Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1864.

Extracts from the GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.

1st Stage, or Premonitory.—In this stage the remedy acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

2nd Stage, or that of Vomiting and Purging.—In this stage the remedy possesses great power, more than any other we are acquainted with; two or three doses being sufficient.

3rd Stage, or Collapse.—In all cases restoring the Pulse. So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D.

I have no hesitation in stating that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am perfectly satisfied with the results.

Dr. M'MILLMAN, of New Galloway, Scotland.

I consider it the most valuable medicine known.

G. HAYWARD, Esq., Surgeon, Stow-on-ye-Wold.

I am now using Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, with marvellous good effects in allaying inveterate sickness in pregnancy.

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have.

Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta.

Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhoea.

C. V. RIDOUT, Esq., Surgeon, Egham.

As an Astringent in severe Diarrhoea and an Anti-spasmodic in Colic with Cramps in the Abdomen, the relief is instantaneous. As a Sedative in Neuralgia and Tic-Douloureux its effects were very remarkable. In Uterine Affections I have found it extremely valuable.

From J. M'GRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.B.C.P., London, late Staff-Surgeon to H. M. F.

November 26, 1859.

Sir.—After prescribing Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE for the last three years, in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Douloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acted as a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions.

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steam-ship Great Eastern.

I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect.

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON & Co., Horncastle.

We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other Sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after-effects.

INDIA AND ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

DILBUGHAR, UPPER ASSAM, INDIA, MARCH 6, 1880.
 DEAR SIR,—I desire to state the advantage which I, and I do not doubt many others in this part of the world, have derived from your Fruit Salt. Unlike other Saline Agents, it is not lowering in its action, though previous to its immediate action it naturally causes great thirst. I have used it on board ship in tropical latitudes, and both there and here I can most honestly bear witness to the fact that its use has ward off fever over and over again. When taken in time it is invaluable. As far as I am aware it is most popular in this part of North Eastern Asiatic India, and I consider that you are distinctly entitled to this testimonial from me. I need not add it is wholly unrequested. I enclose my card, but from my extreme individual inconvenience arising from publicity I do not wish my name to appear, and merely subscribe myself,
 Most truly yours,
 "A PLANTER."

J. C. ENO, Esq., Hatcham Fruit Salt Works, London. S.E.

THE "WANGANUI CHRONICLE," MARCH 24, 1880.

FRUIT SALT.—There seems to be a large demand in this part of the world for Eno's "Fruit Salt." A few weeks ago Mr. Williamson laid in a considerable stock, which has all been sold, and now he has imported seventy cases more.

HOW TO ASSIST NATURE WITHOUT HAZARDOUS FORCE.—A Gentleman, who is now at over three score years and ten, writes:—"I have for a long time used ENO'S FRUIT SALT; I have found it an effective gentle aperient, very beneficial to persons of sedentary habits, especially such as exercise not the limbs but the brain, and frequently require to assist nature without hazardous force. It acts according to the quantity taken, either as a refreshing in drink, or as a cooling and refreshing drink; and I am convinced that it does not weaken when it stimulates."

"ENO A REVIVER A ONE," reads the same each way. This unique testimonial was kindly sent by a lady from Ipswich.

RHEUMATISM.—A Lady writes:—"I have derived great benefit from ENO'S FRUIT SALT. I have lost a painful rheumatic swelling around the knee-joint; health has improved generally. I consider it a great blessing to the community, and trust that it may be adopted far and wide."

"NO EFFORT, however small, put forth for the right cause fails of its effect. No voice, however feeble, lifted up for Truth ever dies amidst confused noises of Time. Through discords of sin, sorrow, pain, and wrong, it rises a deathless melody whose notes of warning are hereafter to be changed to those of triumph, AS THEY BLEND WITH THE GREAT HARMONY OF A RECONCILED UNIVERSE."

WITH each Bottle of ENO'S FRUIT SALT is given a large Illustrated Sheet, showing how to stamp out disease and premature death by natural means.

SUCCESS IN LIFE.—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.
